THE DANGERS OF CELLULOID
(The Lancet.)

Evidence is not wanting that celluloid is a very dangerous material and its increasing use in the arts and manufactures suggests that the storage of this extremely inflammable substance should be placed under stricter conditions of control than are at present required at present. A short time ago a serious fire occurred at a factory in Walton-on-Thames in which celluloid was employed for the preparation of cinematograph films. Apparently the fire was started by a film ignited in some way not satisfactorily cleared up, but the ignition of this film was sufficient to involve very rapidly the entire factory in flames. One factory had failed to make his escape and perished. In the evidence at the coroner's inquiry it was stated that there were no less than 27 miles of celluloid film on the premises at the time of the fire. In spite of the precautions being taken this very large stock of highly inflammable material distributed in a large number of this is quite evident that if fire had reached them an enormous conflagration, if not explosion, would have ensued. As a matter of fact, in the present case, owing to the prompt and efficient action of the fire brigade, more serious consequences were averted. The existence of such a place in the midst of an inhabited area might surely give rise to well-founded apprehensions as to the risks to which the storage of celluloid on this scale might expose the neighborhood.

TRIALS OF THE OCEAN EDITOR

Making a "Wireless" Newspaper is Not an Easy Task.

(N. Y. Evening Post.)

The duties of Herr Rabien, chief steward of the Kronprinzessin Cecilie, involve among many other things the editing of the Ocean Gazette. This publication is issued every day of the passage for the purpose of setting forth the news of the world as it comes to the ship from the various wireless telegraph stations on the coast, or islands, or lightships of this country and England.

In addition to the printing of the news, the Gazette and other papers of the kind are devoted to advertisements, "thumb nail" short stories, and humorous sketches. As these fill the editorial sanctum keep Herr Rabien has a little time in supplying the pages devoted to matter of the sort.

In addition to news—well, then it all depends upon the kind of reporter at the other end of the ether, so to speak. There are good wireless reporters and bad reporters. There are some who report the flow of words is of just the proper sort. There are others whose ideas, or facts, rather, flow turgidly and wear some handsome jewelry. Among the guests were: Dr. and Mrs. Murray McLaren, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Earle, Colonel Drury, Mrs. W. Frank Hathaway, who has been ill for a week, is able to be out again.

Every particular of it was a most enjoyable function. The prizes were won: 1st, Mrs. J. V. Anglin; 2nd, Mrs. McKay; 3rd, Mrs. Fred E. Sawyer; 4th, Mr. Roy Campbell. The supper table was elaborately decorated with spring flowers. Mrs. Robertson received her guests in black and white lace trimmings and wore some handsome jewelry.
