Canning Items.

The debate between Canning Division and the V. M. C. A., of Kentville, came off very successfully on Thursday evening. The Kentville speakers were Messrs Fairweather, (leader) Swanson and Brodbeck; of Canning, Mr. N. W. Eaton, (leader) Rev. Dr. Crowell and Mr. G. W. Parker. The discussion, which was animated, eloquent and instructive, was listened to with enthusiasm and appreciation by the audience. The judges, Rev. Mr. Mellor, W. P. Shafer and Kenneth Lee, decided by a few points in favor of the V. M. C. A. speakers who upheld the negative side of the question. Several selections of music were rendered by the Canning band, who generously gave their services for the evening. They were assisted, in the absence of two of their members, by Mr. Watson, of Wolfville.

The Music Festival.

The fifth annual music festival under the auspices of Acadia Seminary was successfully held on Thursday and Friday of last week in College Hall. This is undoubtedly the greatest musical event of the year in the maritime provinces, and the attendance from the various sections of the province increases from year to year. No other festival has attracted so many visitors to Wolfville as that of last week, and all went away delighted with the splendid musical feast which they enjoyed.

The choral club, under the efficient direction of Prof. Ringwald, has apparently engaged in a very profitable season's work. The chorus, which this year numbered nearly one hundred and fifty voices, was splendidly handled, and their work was the feature of the festival. Mr. Ringwald proved himself to be not only a most successful instructor but an able and authoritative leader as well. This was his first appearance before a Canadian audience, although in Germany and the United States he is known for his work as a conductor. In Leipzig he one time directed a chorus of nine hundred voices, with an orchestra of one hundred pieces.

A large part of the success of the choral work is due to the exceptionally clever work of Miss Edith Woodman, the talented young accompanist. Miss Woodman received high praise from the visiting artists who were delighted with her work. Acadia Seminary deserves to be congratulated upon training so promising a musician.

Thursday evening witnessed the performance of Coleridge-Taylor's beautiful setting to 'Hiawatha's Departure.' This northern poem of Hiawatha makes an interesting study musically. We see the frozen forest, with crackling twigs, and the bright, dry starlight overhead. The Indian music, with its harmony, which is built chiefly on variety of rhythm—complex, elaborate, changing rhythm—makes the form of song to flash before the eye, and gives the mind a picture. The sudden transitions, the frequent changes in sentiment, appeal to the earnest listener. The cries, the sighs, the weird and strikingly solemn, choral-like strains interspersed with impetuous passages of surpassing beauty, could not fail to produce a lasting impression on those who had the pleasure of hearing it. In sharp contrast to it were the majestic and sublime harmonies of Schubert's 'Omnipotence.' Here a different atmosphere prevails—classic repose, noble simplicity are characteristic of this composition. The plaintive ballad of 'The Knight and his Daughter' by Horatio Parker, with the beautiful part for lady voices, likewise, very well received.

The performance of 'The Creation,' by Haydn, was looked forward to with intense interest. The words of the composer, 'I mean this work to live long,' have been amply fulfilled. This great oratorio was composed over a hundred years ago and countless performances testify to its never-waning popularity. There is a wonderful freshness, a child-like simplicity, and an overwhelming grandeur in its choruses, solo parts, duets and trios. Madame Marie Zimmerman, the well-known soprano, who has appeared in many musical festivals, and is a great favorite in the States, delighted all with her pure, strong voice, which seemed specially suited for the oratorio. The group of songs, which she gave in the afternoon, was enthusiastically received.

Mr. Rattigan appeared here two years ago, and his return was gladly welcomed. He possesses a sweet and clear tenor voice which is well adapted to advantage during the festival. Mr. Raymond has a bass voice of great range and flexibility. His innate dramatic power was particularly noticeable in parts of Hiawatha.

The Boston Philharmonic Sextette did splendid work in sustaining the choruses and solos with good taste and great ease. Their selections were a treat to all music loving people. Mr. Keith, the violinist, became a great favorite with all present.

Much credit is due to Rev. H. T. DeWolfe, the efficient principal of the Seminary, for his untiring efforts in providing such high class musical advantages for the people of Wolfville and vicinity.

Bowing Club Lecture.

The members of the Bowing Club held their final meeting for the season 1907-8 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Chase on Monday evening. Following an annual custom the meeting was in the nature of an informal at home to which the club welcomed all members of the community.

Prof. Gray, of the English department of Acadia College, in a pleasantly written paper took up Browning's 'Abt Vogler,' a peculiarly fitting selection in view of the recent musical festivals. Prof. Gray considered the poem from various points of view, structurally, musically and morally. An effective conclusion was reached by the aid of Miss Portia Starr, who, through the medium of the piano, illustrated the final stanza of the poem as Prof. Gray read it aloud. The vice-president, Mr. Wright, who, in the absence of the president, Mrs. Moore, has aptly conducted the club during the winter through the labyrinthian wilds of Browning's writings, welcomed Mrs. Moore, who was present, to her old position in a few warm and appreciative words that were heartily endorsed by all present. Votes of thanks were moved to Prof. Gray and to Mrs. Chase. The work for the coming season was partly arranged for. An invitation from Mrs. Clarence Borden for the first meeting for the year 1908-9 was accepted, and after an hour of social intercourse the meeting adjourned with many thanks to Mrs. Chase for her unvarying hospitality and interest.
