Editor's Talk

FOOTBALL will be the distinguishing feature in next week's issue. The end of an exciting season is in sight, and we shall sum it up and illustrate it in a manner worthy both of the autumn sport and the Courier. The superb full-page drawing by Arthur Heming will be the finest football picture ever published in Canada; a good thing to stick on your wall among the outdoor pictures. A football expert will review the season's play in trenchant, easy-reading style. We shall have an abundance of football photographs and a splendid football cover.

But the main and abiding interest of the Courier will be amply maintained. One especially virile indoor feature will be a strong inside story by Arthur Stringer, illustrated by one of our own staff of artists. "The Crucible" is a big stage story; one that gives the reader a remarkable insight into the grim realities that stalk behind the drop curtain of the play.

NEXT week also "The Monocle Man" returns to duty. He has had a long holiday, and should have some bright ideas gathered up. We feel sure he will be warmly welcomed by everybody, especially as he promises not to take another extended holiday for two years.

OUR Christmas number is right on our programme. We shall excel last year's by a good margin—which is almost enough to say. In next week's "Editor's Talk," however, we shall line up the strong features of that issue.
