

the question

By TIMOTHY DUGDALE

If you could make a brief to the Bovey Commission what would you say?

Anita Granger, Visual Arts, III
"On one hand, enrolment is cut down making classes smaller, but on the other it is too exclusive. People should be able to get the education they want."

Ian Mitchell, Psychology, II
"The student influx as a result of the job market makes admission cutback impossible. It is unfair to limit them."

Vito Sinopli, Economics, I
"Keep in mind who the leaders of the future are and keep the students coming in."

Liz Hrabowsky, English, III
"Closing down facilities seems ironic in the sense that enrolment is up. Education is a growing concern considering the job markets."

Bonni McKee, Film, I
"Communicate with the students and know their viewpoints before making a decision."

Liz Sitts, Psychology, I
"It is a contradiction to encourage people to further their education and then put up blockades when you want to enter."

Frank Simonetta, Arts, I
"Raising entrance standards, depending on the faculty, is a good idea, and shutting down faculties just makes enrolment problems somewhere else."

Sandra Fabrizi, Arts, I
"They shouldn't be limiting education opportunities but at the same time there should be a certain quality to the degrees."
