

answer, if any, rises in your mind. Yet I can see no satisfactory answer as possible. If, in a different frame, I would have been different, that must argue inherent weakness. On the other hand, if I would have been the same, in spite of a happier start, it seems to argue inherent faults or folly in myself.