

The Question of the Hour?

THE question of the hour for each man to answer—no matter what his station in life may be—is: Can I afford to be without proper protection for those dependent upon me in case of my death? This question applies as well to the prosperous business man as to the laboring man, and there can be but one answer: Neither can be without protection. Then the inquiry naturally follows: Where can I get the best insurance at the least possible cost, consistent with safety? If a man really wants protection for those dependent upon him, he wants that PROTECTION AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE COST. This is life insurance proper, and to this end THE CANADIAN ORDER OF FORESTERS has been formed.

There is no aim or desire on the part of this Society to bring wealth to the family. Its purpose is simply that a fund may be at hand, which shall at least cover the necessities which in a majority of cases, exist when Death removes the bread-winner. Its object is to practically solve that problem which is constantly in the minds of those who are obliged to live up to their incomes, and have families whom they might be called upon to leave without any means dependent upon sources outside of themselves. The millions of dollars which the Order has divided among just such families is a complete and satisfactory solution which cannot be controverted. The families are provided for, and if contentment is a blessing, the husband and father who has thus prepared for the future has the added blessing of a contented mind while on the rounds of his daily vocation.
