LA BELLE'S PRELIMINARY HEARING

In Progress Before the Police Magistrate This Morning—Number of Witnesses Examined—Prisoner Bought Gun and Outfit at Whitehorse and Afterwards Departed in a Small Boat With the Murdered Men—Case Continued This Afternoon.

Never since the famous trial of O'Brien has the police court been as densely crowded as it was this morning at the preliminary hearing of LaBelle, on the charge of murdering Southill and Beaudoin. Before ten o'clock the whole court was crowded, but the hearing did not begin until eleven, and in the meantime men kept on pushing their way in until it was impossible, it seemed, for another to find footing. There were twenty-one witnesses for the prosecution present, possibly a number for the defence, and among the large audience were a large number of Frenchmen. Midway in the taking of testimony Crown Prosecutor Congdon had the thoughtfulness to remember the witnesses and remarked that he did not think they ought to be condemned to stand throughout the hearing, so the benches ranged against the rear wall which were filled with people standing and looking over the heads of those in front, were brought within the railing for the witnesses. Detective Welsh came in, with two policemen, carrying a large trunk. This was afterwards identified as the property of the murdered Southill. Then came the rifle which was purchased at Whitehorse by LaBelle, and the mere frame of a value which is believed to be that of Southill's. After this the prisoner was led in by Sergeant Smith and Constable Burns, the latter of whom appeared in uniform for the first time since this inquiry was opened he having been engaged on detective work. Mrs. Nelson, of Selkirk, from whose roadhouse LaBelle purchased provisions was given a seat within the railing. Mr. Auguste Noel, who appeared for the prisoner, opened the proceeding with an application for a further adjournment until next week. It had been remanded until today, he said, upon a telegram that relatives of the accused were coming from Montreal, and they desired that nothing should be done in the matter until their arrival, but he had received no news of their coming. Crown Prosecutor Congdon said he was always averse to opposing an adjournment in cases of so serious a character, but on the last occasion this case was remanded it was understood that the case was to go on today. The crown had many witnesses present and he thought it ought to go on, particularly as it was only a preliminary hearing to decide if there was sufficient evidence upon which to hold the accused. Magistrate Wroughton pointed out the expense of keeping the witnesses, many of them from a distance, here, and said the case must go on according to the understanding previously arrived at. LaBelle then stood up and was formally charged and Mr Congdon called as the first witness Alexander Saine. He said that he came from Nova Scotia, and on June 5th left Montreal for Dawson. He made the acquaintance on the train of a man he knew then as Leon, but now as Leon Southill. The latter was a Frenchman, speaking no English, and as the witness spoke no French the conversations between them were mostly conducted by notions. The day they reached Vancouver Leon met two men named Constantin and Beaudoin, and was often with them during their two days stay there. These men also spoke French. These two men travelled on the same steamer with them, the Amir, to Skagway, and the same train to Whitehorse. He recognized the portraits of them shown to him. He did not become very much acquainted with them because he did not speak French. Constantin spoke English well but he did not know whether Beaudoin understood English or not. Beaudoin spoke very little, he recall four. He was about 100 feet away and shouted good-bye to them. Two hours after that the steamer Crimmins on which witness traveled passed that of Leon and he hailed them. On both occasions he noticed a trunk on their boat which he recognized as belonging to Leon. Witness arrived in Dawson on June 19th. He had never spoken to Fournier while at Whitehorse. He had recognized him in the guard room here among five other persons, without the slightest hesitation. The witness was then cross-examined by Mr. Noel, beginning specially with the statement that there were but three men with Leon when he saw them at Whitehorse in the boat. Leon was saying, he said, Constantin was facing Leon, Beaudoin in the front and Fournier at the rear. He did not see a fifth man. When he saw the boat from the steamer, he only saw Fournier and the three men he had traveled with from Vancouver. Harry Edward Cleveland, the next witness, said he had built a few boats at Whitehorse, and one of them he had sold to the prisoner LaBelle. He was shown two photographs of boats and recognized one as a picture of the one he sold. A month or two after he had made the sale he had been shown the boat here and recognized it. He had two boats on the shore near Whitley & Pedlar's store and LaBelle and Fournier came to look at them. Fournier offered $20 for one which was refused. They came back and offered $25.50. That was refused and Fournier said "You are no Jew." Afterward Fournier came back and said "I'll give you a dollar." Witness said yes and Fournier paid him a $20 bill and $4 in silver. That was on June 15th. No other men were with them. The
