Then the Woman of the House Brought Police Court Charge Against them and They Were Fined.

The little yellow house by the track well-known to a certain class of citizens furnished police court case enough to occupy the attention of Judge Houston all this merning. The house is that little frame structure J. Malone, Belle River, telegraphed John Piggott, of the Chatham Navigation Co., to-day, asking information in regard to his son who was said to have been drowned in Lake St. Chair yesterday. Mr. Piggott has heard nothing of any fatality. situated north of the C. P. R. track on Queen street and known as the domicile of Mrs. Annie Reaume, once known as Miss Martin and at another time as Miss Freelick. The police has heard nothing of any latality.

The following Maple City baseball players journeyed to Wallaceburg yesterday. Douglas, McLashian, Barrett, Weldon, Armstrong, Oldershaw, Brady, Mount and Robert. They were defeated, however, by a score of 26-10. Douglas and Brady did the twirling for the Chatham boys while McDongal occupied the box for court ease arose from the "rough and tumble fight," as the witness called it -which took place there last Monday

Mrs. Annie Reaume, the woman of the house, laid a charge against three well-known Maple City young men, charging them with creating a dis-

Mrs. Reaume was the first witness. She said that she was sitting quietly sewing and talking to two young gentlemen, one a South Afrian veteran, the other a North Chatham lad, when a knock came to the door and a strangerfellow asked to get in. She refused admittance, saying she had company, and the strangdepot, Detroit, was destroyed by fire er stood there "chewing the rag." To the judge, who didn't understand the flagration was a great sight and it proved one of the greatest fires in the term, Annie explained that chewing the rag meant mumbling over. One of the three outsiders complained that every time he came, she wouldn't let The three outsiders had then tried to get in. The South African Hero, with all a soldier's gallantry, had come to her rescue at this juncture, when on of the unfavored ones declared with an oath that he could lick the brave warrior laddie quicker than he could turn round. Then the row began and the five men mixed up in battle fierce. Mrs. Reaume, seeing that the three outsiders were making it rather warm for the two insiders, decided to even up the opposing forces, and seizing a rocking chair, she broke it over the heads of the invaders. The Amazonian reinforcement proved two much for the attacking party and they retreated leaving one man wounded. He was released, however. The next morning, the gore that plentifully sprinkled the sidewalk proved that the enemy had retired much damaged. To Mr. Lewis, counsel for the de-fendants, Mrs. Reaume said that the South African veteran came sometimes once, sometimes twice a week. She was a married woman, but refused at first to tell what the man of war came for. She finally acknowledged that he came to spend his evenings, but refused to answer when asked if he spent his money. The warrior bold wasn't a boarder and didn't take his meals at the house. Reaume, however, wouldn't answer when asked if the ex-soldier slept at young'men, his gallant rush to the rescue and then the fight which he styled, "rough and tumble, every man for himself and the devil for us all." This soldierly answer displeased the Judge, who cautioned the witness to confine himself to answering the questions asked.

The defendants then went into the witness box on their own behalf.
One of these young men said that there was a full house and that was why they were refused admittance. He had been struck by a piece of of glass in the head and the cut bled profusely. He had visited a young woman named May Robinson in the house and had paid her money.

Judge Houston in addressing the prisoners said that there was one thing certain and that was that the young men had gone to the house for improper purposes. Judge Morrison, of Hamilton, had held that no matter how, bad the house was the men had no right to house was the men had no right to go in if they were not wanted. The character of the woman was no de-fense. The parties inside had a perfect right to use sufficient force to keep the invaders out. A man who frequents a discountable house who frequents a disreputable house was just as guilty as the person who kept it. One of the defendants, according to his own admissions, was Hable to punishment not exceeding six months in the Central Prison and a fine. This charge may yet be laid. The young men were each fined $6 and costs, which amounted to $8.75 aptece or 15 days in jaid.
