Pronounces Her a Thing of sauty and a Joy Forever. Trieotrin Pronounces Her a Thing Ox.

Beauty and a Joy Forever.

I do remember me, in these faint and weary days, of the youth of my spirit, when I wandered fancy free through such works as those of the mortal Junius Henri Browne, writes Tricotrin in Puck. And I do, moreover, remember me of a remark of his which went thus: "Her nose was divine inasmuch as it pointed toward Heaven." Whereat I was wont to laugh, knowing that thereby did Browne signify a pug-nosed girl with large gray eyes and a sunburst of ambrosial curis that filled the earth with white horses.

sunburst of ambrosial curis that mind user arth with white horses. Now that the sand-paper of adversity has scraped the gloss off my youth, and exposed beneath the varnish some of the cheapness of the natural material, I laugh not at the pur-nosed girl. I smile at her. For, verily, I do conceive that she is a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

But, alsa! the philosophers are not with me. Authorities on personal beauty, from Winckelmann to Henry T. Finck, say that a nose should be straight. Brother Finck says that the Greek artists, who made straight noses, took their idea of the divine nose from the contours of childhood. Their gods and goddesses possessed no eavity at An English Farmer's Cruel Revenge on His False Lady Love.

About thirty miles south of London, in one of the prettiest parts of England, is a village called Shalford. Adjoining it is a village common, or public pasture. There are a few houses frouting on it, prominent among which there was, about twenty years ago, a rather singular-looking editice, straight noses, took their idea of the divine nose from the contours of childhood. Their gods and goddessee possessed no cavity at the root of the nose, and this, quoth Finck, is characteristic of youth. "Later in life," he continues, "these cavities (brain cavities) buigs forward and produce the hollow, which is, therefore, an indication of superior cranial development and higher intellectual powers. Hence, as Prof. Kollmann suggests, the object of the Greek artists in making the nose of their deities form a straight line with the forehead was probably to give them the stamp of eternal youth."

But why should a straight line be beautiful in the midst of the gracious contours of the wedding day had been fixed. The wedding day had been fixed but a few days before the one fixed for the reception of a young lady of goo position who was shortly to become the bridge. The wedding day had been fixed but a few days before the one fixed for the reception of a young lady of goo position who was shortly to become the bridge of the content of the wedding day had been fixed but a few days before the one fixed for the wedding day the bride disappeared, and the province of the content of making the nose of their detics form a straight line with the forehead was probably to give them the stamp of everhaly the stamp of the reception of a young lady of good by the probably to give them the stamp of everhaly out.

In the midst of the gracious contours of the human face! The curvilinear prospect is that which wholly inspires the artistic mind. Does not even a small boy, even one who has but one eye, and sees but one half the glory of nature, rejoice more in the curves of a dog's tail, a velocipede, a he goat, a mince pie, a foot-ball, a marble, a silver quarter, or what not, than in the square of the hypothenuse or the instructor's ruler!

And what is a small boy, with unkept hair and freekled cheeks, with seven warts upon his hands and the essence of joy in his heart, but the incarnate spirit of eternal youth, not yet jangled out of tune by the shadow of age and the inevitable wreating for the wherewithal? Does he bite his lips if the world grows old and kingdoms fall, frommerce vanishes into "trackless, blue immensity," and the tariff swells like the shadow of doom, if the school keeps or not!

These things show that there are both beauty and eternal love in curves, and argue that the Greek artists did not well when they made foreheads and noses of their gods run into one another in a straight line.

Better is the mild and gentle hollow at the root of the nose, and better still the vide and the organ of smell, which gives it the appraisance of the organ of smell, which gives it the appraisance of the rogan of smell, which gives it the appraisance of the organ of smell, which gives it the sound of the mose, and beave with the girl with he pug nose follows it, whither will she tend? Surely around and around the earth on a parallel of the particulary the properties of th y mysterious light seemed to emerge. The two men got away safely and corroborated the parish clerk's description of the scene. The story was not generally credited, but again and again was the house rented, only to be vacated by each succeeding tenant after one day's occupation. Neither Somers nor his false lady love ever reappeared at Shalford, and when your correspondent last saw it the black house was still unoccupied and was gradually falling into ruins. A rich baby's layette, says the New York Sun, now costs $500 or $600, and includes fine-knitted shirts of snowy vool, beautiful hand-wrought dresses, no wool, beautiful hand-wrought dresses, not frilled and heavy with embroudery and lace as formerly, but made of the finest French nainsook, tucked and hemmed by hand, with rows of drawn work as fine as lace, and pretty stitchings of briar work in fine floss, all wrought by hand, with real lace edges of narrow Valenciennes, and costing, plain and simple as they are, sometimes floss, all wrought by hand, with real lace edges of narrow Valenciennes, and costing, plain and simple as they are, sometimes $50, $60 and $75. A wrapper, shawl and little sacque of fine silk flannel, embroidered with forget-me-nots in the delicate blue of the natural flowers, or closk of heavy, white silk, wrought with the same fine briar stitchings in silk rows on rows, a little close cap of the same material, embroidered all over with tiny silk sprays, and tiny silken socks of pretty tints, are included in the layette, which is as dainty as a mother's loving fancy can design. The baby basket is a mass of lace, frills and ribbons and thin muslin, lined with pretty satin or silesia, and costs all the way from $5 to $50. The basinet, or cradie, is another pretty bauble of brass or willow, white enameled, canopied with satin and lace, and with linen furnishings hem-stitched as finely as a lady's 'kerchief, and covered with a soft silk quitt of down.

One noted baby born in New York not long ago had a cradle of mother-of-pearl in the shape of a sea shell, with legs and handle of solid gold, lined with amber satin and with a canopy of satin and rare old lace falling from a gold framework and sweeping the floor. The linen was hand-stitched and edged with real lace by the fair hands of the happy mother. Five sets of diamond buttons, six gold rattles, a solid silver toilet set, solid gold safety pins, diamond amulets and rings enough to cover every little finger and toe were among his baby presents.

Then there's the christening and a robe which costs from $100 to $1,000, a mass of rich lace and fine stitching, sometimes made of point lace, and, like a weeding dress, worn at the ceremony and never worn again.

renes. In so far as the creation of man goes the legrend is not unlike that related by Moses, only that the fall came before Eve arrived. After the man had eaten of the forbidden fruit he became affected with a boil on the leg, out of which, when it burst, came a beautiful girl. The man's first thought was to throw her to the pigs, but he was commanded by amessenger from heaven to let her play among the diggings until she was of marriageable age, then to make her his wife. He did so, called her Babours, and she became the mother of all the race of men.

Her One Remarkable Whim of Extravagance Diagnosed by a Correspondent.

There is a wealthy New York widow who has a church and a chaplain of her own, writes a New York correspondent. She is Mrs. Moses Taylor. The church was built by her at Long Branch at a cost of about $70,000. It is Presbyterian, and there is a nominal board of trustees, but Mrs. Taylor paid every dollar of the cost and is the owner outright. It is an ornate ediffice, and one of its features is a memorial stamed glass window inscribed to her dead husband. "Blessed are they that die in the Lord," it says. The sinner might add that they are considerably blest who live pessessors of the enormous wealth accumulated by Moses Taylor.
