"Do Not Speak to the Man at the Wheel."

WHY WE SHALL PULL THROUGH BY PAYING THE FULL PRICE OF LIBERTY AND PEACE.

"In days to come, when we have the leisure to survey temperately and dispassionately the devils and perils of ways by which the nations' regained the priceless boon of peace, we shall be able to recognize that Great Britain's contribution to Armistice was determined by, and grew in proportion with, her initiation into the mystic of self-sacrifice," says the Glasgow Herald.

"This country has had to submit to a rigorous discipline for the purpose of learning that no nation, any more than any man, can live to itself alone; that there are times and causes in which the whole is to be so much more esteemed than the component parts that the individual can only be said to be playing a worthy role when he ceases to think of himself, and that each of us will only rejoice in a new-found freedom of soul after a purifying experience in the selflessness of the mass.

"Knowing all the facts, the worst as well as the best, Mr. Lloyd George declares that we can do it—we can beat the submarine and defy the enemy. There can be only one reply—We shall do it. Step by step we have been thrown back on ourselves. Some of our most cherished institutions and principles have had to be dearer and more precious things have had to be laid on the altar. Is it a hard matter that we should now get down to the simplicities of life and beat some little character of the flesh?

Not surely if we believe, as we have so often professed, that the last man and the last shifting world will not be too great a price to pay for the nestling blessing of liberty and peace," replies the Glasgow Herald.

In the Stockhold.
"The heaviest parallel to the present condition of England is provided by the scene in a stockhold of a crack liner," writes Mr. Archibald Hurd in the Daily Telegraph.

"Anyone who has watched the men stripped to the waist, shovelling in the coal, will never forget the experience. It looks, at first sight, as though they were struggling to avert some disaster, whereas in fact they are probably endeavoring to beat the record in spite of a head wind and a rough sea. No one fears that port will not be reached, but when?—that is the cause of anxious interest. And hence the frenzied activity in the stockholds.
"This is very much what is happening to-day in this country. The public realize that the submarine presents an entire new problem, and they learn that a large number of merchantmen are being sunk—22 since February 17—some of them loaded with valuable cargoes; and they are impatient to complete the circle of victory with a snap, and this development is delaying it. So there is behind the scenes that peculiar form of energetic participation in war which is characteristic of a tutions, free Press, and free speech—all employed in raising steam in the State's bottom. Unhappily the Germans are strangers to all three, and cannot recognize their activities; and consequently, their Ministers are able to serve up such ludicrous prophecies of our speedy downfall as that attributed to Admiral von Capelle.

"Hold Out, Fritz."
"What is happening is this. The poor Germans throughout the Empire —about 70,000,000 of them, associated in misery with about 50,000,000 other sufferers—as they tighten their belts and bid to expect early victory; they say to one another, 'Hold out, Fritz'; it is now only a matter of a few weeks at most; Prussianism will be triumphant; and then think how glad we shall be that we did not give in!'
That is the tragedy of the present position. The whole world is paying the price of this misrepresentation of the condition of England, and only the Germans, spoon-fed, do not realize that the issue of the war is now beyond all possibility of doubt.

Reduce Consumption.
"Our recent losses have been grave, and we must organize our resources so that the depredations may be made good as soon as possible. In the meantime we must reduce our consumption of everything, so as to relieve the pressure on shipping, the complementary agency of Navy and Army—in other words, restrict our demands for everything until they coincide with the limited supply.
"But we do well not to overlook one fact. We are to-day where Germany was a year or eighteen months ago.
We are far better placed to hold out in the economic struggle than any other country in Europe, belligerent or neutral, if we enter on a whirlwind shipbuilding movement. Ships are the one thing necessary to us. The outlook has been immensely improved by the intervention of the United States. If we must suffer such constriction as Germany has been suffering for many months past we have the assurance that long before we reach such a crisis as now confronts that country, valiant, resourceful hands will be stretched across the Atlantic.
"Germany may raise her eyes to the hills or drop them to the valleys, but she can expect no help. She exists in a ringed fence, her only partners, Austria-Hungary, distracted, hopeless, and bankrupt; Turkey, bankrupt of everything else besides money, with her hands red with the blood of the thousands of massacred Armenians; and Bulgaria, the atrocious despoiler of Serbia. She is opposed by the Allies, with a free population of about three times that of the German Empire. It is probable that within a few weeks we shall be able, in general terms, to claim that our cause is the cause of all the civilised world, for other Powers are showing signs of coming in.
"Is it imaginable that the submarine will bring to their knees the United States, France, Russia, Italy, Britain, and the other Allies, representing immense resources of intelligence and man-power?
Germany's Reverses All Round.
"May it not be that the recent heavy losses at sea are traceable to a very simple cause? For the first time since the war opened, there is no spot on the war map where Germany and her dupes are not suffering reverses. The Western front is changing to their disadvantage, and grievous losses are being sustained; the Russian army stands firm on the East, having, owing to the pressure of the British and French troops, gained time for readjustment after the revolution; in Mesopotamia and Palestine the Turks, under German leadership, are being punished; the iron domination of the Allied fleets is strangling the life-blood of the German Empire, and even the submarine liners can no longer run; the German colonies have gone; German commerce is dead; the German flag has been driven off the seas. The hungry and distressed people may cast their eyes east, west, or south, and nowhere can they find anything to relieve their depression.
"It may be pointed out that the intensity of the submarine piracy became apparent after the British offensive on the Western front had chilled Germany's heart. The British losses of ships at sea doubled at the moment when Germany's losses of men and material in France attained proportions unparalleled in any former months.
"Can we not imagine Marshal von Hindenburg and the other villains of the piece consorting together to discover some means, in face of increasing depression and civil disorder from Hamburg to Vienna, of providing one cheerful prospect, to support hopes deferred at a moment when Count Reventlow had declared, 'No victory, no Monarchy'?

moment when the British Navy stands between us and Prussianism. It is not an act of patriotism for critics, who are necessarily unfamiliar with the conditions at sea, and know nothing of the shoals and eddies, to distract the attention of those who are taking the ship of State into the port of victory," concludes Mr. Hurd.

"The objection to the submarine as a commerce destroyer is not only that it is inhuman and illegal, but that it requires the whole world to be attacked," says the Westminster Gazette. "Do these Germans really believe that the world is going to take it lying down, that there are to be no counter-measures to their attacks, that, because we are pinched for food, we are going to submit to a practice which leaves every one of us at their mercy, and would enable them at the end of the war to start again as soon as they chose, and, in the meantime, to hold all their neighbors to ransom?"

"The submarine and mine are manifestations of desperation on the part of the enemy, and they may involve this nation in privation and suffering," says the Daily Telegraph.
"But neither the one nor the other can bring victory to Germany unless all the teaching of history is unsound.
We should play into the hands of the enemy if we were to lose either courage, patience or composure, endeavoring to deflect the naval administration from the course it is pursuing to bring the enemy to his knees, amid the ruins of an Empire which already is under a constriction rendering life almost impossible."—Public Opinion.

we've had enough.
His fellow states-ed with disgrace. His little course is run, his statesmanship is done; in outer darkness now he clasps his clanny brow, and doubtless wishes that he hadn't used his hat through which to speak a piece; his woe will never cease. And other folks whose jaws wag heedlessly should pause. The man whose active tongue, on roller bearings hung, upon the zephyrs flings unpatriotic things, may find himself, some morn, disdained, a thing of scorn. Perhaps, he means no wrong, by his opinionous strong; but men are under strain, and foolish talk and vain may stir their souls to ire, to doings fierce and dire. And then the gabsmith sees that talk is a disease. While riding on a rail he lifts his bitter wail, and wishes he had cannied the words at his command.

"HIPRESS" with the RED LINE round the top

One Piece Strength!

The seasoned sailor never likes to use a spliced hawser. He wants a single length line every time. Why? Because splicing weakens. There's strength in a single length.

The same principle is used by The B. F. Goodrich Company in making rubber boots. By their wonderful High Pressure process they MOLD the toughest rubber ever known—Goodrich automobile tire rubber—into ONE SOLID HIPRESS boots and shoes!

They call it "Hipress," and it's the only footwear in the world made by this method. It absolutely does away with all the faults of the ordinary stuck-together layer footwear. No layers to loosen and come apart under hard work—no cracks—no peeling—"Hipress" simply can't leak.

And one pair will wear two and oftentimes three pairs of any other boots ever made. In fact, there's so much more wear, so much more comfort in "Hipress" that as soon as it appeared on the market many manufacturers made footwear that looked like "Hipress." But it only imitates the color. It hasn't the "Hipress" wear. See that your boots have a "Red Line 'Round the Top"— it's the mark of genuine "Hipress."
