STRAWBERRY RECIPES.

Strawberries are both wild and cultistems of the plant, or from the berry igning strewn on the ground. The several species belong to the genus Fragaría; they are stemless, perennal herbs with compound leaves; they multiply by runners, which are long, weak branches, forming a bud at the end, which soon develops roots and belong to the genus full state of granulated gelatine in a little hot water, add the juice of a learn on, strain into the baked pieplant and pour into a mold. When cold serve with whipped cream.

New varieties are produced from seed, from flowers carefully cross-fertilized. The seedling comes up in four or six weeks, and if protected during winter and transplanted the next spring will bear fruit the following year.

The strawberry is one of our mos delicious fruits, and highly esteemed before and during service and after re-tirement. W. D. Howells wrote some prepared in a variety of ways of which we give a few receipts

The Spider and the Tuning Fork.
A gentleman was recently watching some spiders, when it occurred to him to try what effect the sound of a tuning fork would have upon them. He suspected that they would take it for the buzzing of a fly. He selected a large, ugly spider that had been feasing on files for about two months. The spider was at one edge of its web. Sounding the fork, the man touched a thread at the other side and watched the result.

Mr. Spider had the buzzing sound conveyed to him over his telephone wires, but how was he to know on which particular wire it was traveling? He ran to the center of the control of a superior of the control of th

DINING ROOM.

If no tining room is to be had then make one corner of the kitchen less "kitcheny," and a screen may be placed in front of the cook stove to shut off the view of the kettles and spiders. This is not hard to do.

A dining room need not be large, I use for a dining room what was formerly a small bedroom, says a writer. There is space for only table and chairs, but I can air and then darken it, and it looks attractive. It is difficult to keep the table inviting in appearance if it must be set always in the kitchen.

In highly amusing.

Further than that he would not be an undesirable emigrant, The Continentals who come here bring their wives and children. The Chinaman, on the other hand, are usually single men who emigrate with a view of returning home when they have made their pile and getting married.

In Australia and America the Chinase have been found invaluable as servants. They are not liked by the great mass of the people because they work for lower wages. Here, however, it would be different The costing and will continue to diminish. Therefore the Chinase importation: would not result in anyone being thrown out of employment.
