A MYSTERY STORY OF NEW YORK

CHAPTER VI.

An hour had passed, and the police still reported "no progress" on the Wade-Hanska murder case, now a back number with the newspapers—a story laid aside. Wade, scowling, he says, all lawyer-tricks, waits in the Tombs until the police shall have finished and turned the matter over to the mercurial of the Grand Jury. The week has been equally quiet at the select boarding-house maintained by Rosalie Le Grange—a quiet overcast with gloom and yet illumined with human sympathy and even gaiety. Gradually the household has become a body of Wade pariahs. That, although they know him, is due to Constantine, her sober earnestness, which persisted even in her desperate situation, has moved them, and emotion has persuaded reason and opinion as it always will until we become intellectual machines.

Out of the shadows twinkle two stars—Betsy-Barbara and Tommy North. Rosalie in jest, and Professor Noll in earnest, call Betsy-Barbara "the little household fairy." Encouraged though she is in a tragic guardianship, she is also young and sprightly and a village girl fresh to the wonders of New York. Rosalie is the quiet force, but Betsy-Barbara the visible focus, which draws them all together. She brings to their consideration of Manhattan all the small-town intimacy of interest. She brings to them, intercourses the country habit of asking help, and accepting kindness as matter of course. She asks counsel of Miss Harding and Miss Jones on her autumn clothes. In her spare moments she sews industriously with Rosalie Le Grange, dropping meantime those confidences which flow at sewing-bees. The orphan of a country clergyman and schoolmaster, she has at her finger-tips all the arts of play. Whenever the household stays in of nights, she gathers them together over hearts and bridge, when cards grow stale, she is capable of getting contagious fun out of charades or anagrams. She even starts experimenting with table-tipping and wonders vaguely why Rosalie Le Grange seems uninterested in that one of their sports alone and manages to break it up on the first excuse.

As for Tommy North, he—assistant. He is jester-in-chief to this clan. Primarily, also, he makes the Welsh rabbits, with which, at her suggestion, they finish off the card-parties.

"I appoint myself all-night chief to this establishment," said Tommy North, as he rolled up his sleeves on the first evening. "It is possible that there is a hidden in this happy country to remote that the fame of my Welsh rabbits has not reached it. I learned through toll and suffering—other people's. The first one I made is still hanging on the wall of the old farmhouse. After that, an automobile man saw one of 'em. Great excitement! He thought the problem of the rubber substitute was solved. But he little recked. The tires they made of 'em were all right and long as the auto kept running. But when they stopped out in the country, the field-nice used to come in flocks and kick their lives to nibble those tires. No chemical combination they could ever discover made my Welsh-rabbit tires distasteful to the little creatures. I kept on with my art, till now—I'm too modest to show you the letter I got from the St. Regis the other day."

More and more the boarders take to staying at home. This charming life domestic is a novelty in New York. It seems to them that the world is passing into everything with the simple gaiety of a child. The two stenographers go out of evenings but rarely now. Their friends, Misses, Dayna and Murphy) entreat Rosalie daily to furnish the attic rooms for them. Your waiting-list is waiting for the Metropolitan Club look like the Ludlow Street Jail," remarks Tommy North.

Mr. Estrilla has developed a way of joining them after his evening visits to his sister; and he brings such a smattering of Latin gaiety that they quit their formal games, and talk and laugh and conversation when he enters. Rosalie especially delights in him. He has a quick turn of the tongue, which makes his own and they converse with good-natured repartee. Whenever Estrilla enters the room his eyes travel to Betsy-Barbara and they two play in a boy-and-girl spirit very charming and amusing—every one but Tommy North. All speak well of Estrilla. "I don't know," says even Tommy, "right if he is a wop," says even Tommy.

Through all the sprightly atmosphere Constancia drifts, a figure quiet and dignified and beautiful, and always the Venetian. Generally, she joins the parties in the Le Grange garden. Betsy-Barbara sees to that. According to every desire.

The Magnetic Girl

How She Compels Others to Obey Her Will.

100,000 Copies of Remarkable Book Describing Peculiar Psychic Powers To Be Distributed Post Free to Readers of "The London Advertiser."

"The wonderful power of Personal Influence, Magnetism, Fascination, Mind Control, call it what you will, can surely be acquired by everyone no matter how unattractive or unsuccessful," says Mr. Elmer Ellsworth, author of the new book entitled, "The Key to the Inner Forces."

The book says "here" many astounding facts concerning the practices of the Eastern Yogis, and describes a simple though not a hasty, method of controlling the thoughts and emotions of others; how one may gain the love and friendship of those who might otherwise remain indifferent; how to quickly and accurately judge the character and disposition of an individual; how to cure the most obstinate diseases and habits without drugs or medical treatment; and how to influence the thoughts (telepathy) is explained. Miss Josephine Davis, the popular stage favorite, whose portrait appears above, declares that Prof. Knowles' book opens the door to success, health, and happiness to every mortal. Mr. Walter, who his or her position in life. She believes that Prof. Knowles has discovered principles which, if universally adopted, will revolutionize the mental status of the human race.

The book, which is being distributed broadcast free of charge, is full of photographic reproductions showing how these unseen forces are being used all over the world, and how thousands upon thousands have developed powers which they little dreamed they possessed. The free distribution of the 100,000 copies is being conducted by a large London institution, and a copy will be sent post free to anyone interested. No money need be sent, but those who wish to do so may enclose 5 cents (stamps of your own country) to cover postage, etc. All requests for the free book should be addressed to: National Institute of Science, Free Distribution Dept., 845 C. St., No. 258, Westminster Bridge Road, London, E. C. England. Simply say you would like a copy of "The Key to the Inner Forces" and mention The London Advertiser.

making no suggestion of her own, asking nothing—she is slipping visibly toward melancholy. Days come when she smiles a little, when faint stars gleam in her great eyes; then Betsy-Barbara knows, and the rest conjecture, that some will-o-the-wisp clue has lifted her to a little hope. Nights come when midway in her great eyes, the Betsy-Barbara knows, and the rest conjecture, that some will-o-the-wisp clue has lifted her to a little hope. Nights come when midway in her great eyes, the Betsy-Barbara knows, and the rest conjecture, that some will-o-the-wisp clue has lifted her to a little hope.

The time came when Rosalie Le Grange determined to visit Inspector McGee; she wished to unload some theories of her own concerning the Hanska case. Such visits must be made with all due precaution of secrecy. She chose an evening when, as happened seldom nowadays, nearly all the boarders had engagements elsewhere. Mr. Murphy and Mr. Dayne had invited the "girls" to the theatre; Mr. North was to dine with a man who might give him a job. As a step preliminary to her diplomatic mission, she telephoned to McGee and made with him an appointment far from the office. Then she approached Betsy-Barbara.

"It's asking a lot of you, my dear," she said, "but I've been so busy getting this place shook together that I haven't time to mind my own affairs. I've a cousin in town and I just haven't had time to pay her any attention. It's been simply scandalous the way I've neglected her. Miss Estrilla is kind of nervous tonight, and I hate to leave her alone until her brother comes—anyhow, he misses some evenings. Just sit by her—she'll be glad to see you. You don't have to do even that. Goodness knows, I wish I'd got her a nurse at the start instead of trying to boss the thing myself."

Betsy-Barbara accepted the new responsibility. "I do love it," she said almost cheerfully. "Constancia is going to try to get some sleep tonight, and I'll put her to bed right after dinner. And I've been dying to meet Miss Estrilla."

Mexicans Murder American Citizens

[Canadian Press.]
Guadalajara, Mexico, Oct. 17. — Two American citizens and one Mexican were killed on Tuesday as the result of a feud at Hostotpaniqui, a mining town in the State of Jalisco, about 50 miles to the northwest of this city, and 25 miles from the border with the United States. The dead Americans were Thomas Barrett, a mine manager, and William Kendall, a mine employee.

Barrett was murdered with an axe by the Mexican, who was captured by Kendall, and turned over to the rural guards. While the guards were escorting the murderer to Magdalena, they shot him.

A story reached the mining camp that the murderer had been killed by his own men.

MILITARY AVIATORS MET HORRIBLE DEATHS

Two Fell With Planes and Third Was Burned When Gasoline Exploded.

[Canadian Press.]
Berlin, Oct. 17. — Capt. Haeseler, Lieut. Koch and Sergt. Maute, all of the German army aviation corps, were the victims of the fatal aeroplane accidents which occurred early this morning.

Capt. Haeseler, accompanied by Lieut. Von Freyberg and Koch, and Sergt. Maute, left Berlin last night, with instructions to fly to points in Silesia and Bavaria, respectively, to deliver military messages.

The motor of Capt. Haeseler's aeroplane broke down when the aviators were in the vicinity of Breslau. Capt. Haeseler endeavored to make an emergency landing in the darkness. The aeroplane, which was on a treetop, Capt. Haeseler was pinned in beneath the motor, with an arm and both legs broken. His companion, Lieut. Von Freyberg, was not injured. He clambered down and secured help, but after endeavoring for several hours with assistance to extricate his companion, the gasoline tank of the aeroplane exploded, and Capt. Haeseler was burned to death. Lieut. Koch and Sergt. Maute, with their aeroplane near Wuerzburg and were both instantly killed.

ZEPPELIN DISASTER MAY END EXPERIMENTS

Future Belongs to Aeroplanes and Not Airships, Declares a British Paper.

[Canadian Press.]
London, Oct. 18. — The explosion of the great Zeppelin airship near Berlin yesterday has called forth from practically all of the London newspapers sympathetic comment, together with the prediction that the disaster may terminate aerostatic experiments with craft of this type.

The Times pays a tribute to the Germans by saying: "Nothing reveals more admirably the stuff of which the Germans are made than the manner in which they have borne the long series of accidents which have attended their efforts to conquer the air."

The Daily Chronicle says that: "evidently the future belongs to the aeroplane—not to the airship, and the standard makes sense in observation."

"It is obvious that aerostats of this class are both untrustworthy and dangerous," The Daily News and Leader adds: "It would not be surprising if this terminated the unhappy history of the Zeppelin airship."

The Daily Telegraph thinks, however, that the evolution of the perfect airship may still be pursued not only in Germany, but in England also.

CLEAR ROAD FOR MR. F. E. SMITH.

"Mr. F. E. Smith is earning something like £15,000 a year, and his fair in time to equal the records established by Carson and Isaacs," says the Sketch. "There are practically only Mr. Duke and Sir John Simon in competition with him, and as politics no longer draw him, he is free to devote his time and energies of the Solicitor-General, the clever young man who represents the Walton division of Liverpool in the House, has a clear run before him."

"ONE OF OUR CONQUERORS."

"To wit used to say that the greatest of passages in Shakespeare was the death of Falstaff, and we can well believe that the remark was something of a world of shadows it is much to have to mourn the loss of something substantial," says the Pall Mall.

"So was Harry Pelissier's, and this perhaps is why at an epoch which is not wanting in sensations, his untimely death has been a more than momentous thing. He brought into English society and amusement a note which we are slow to recognize as foreign, and his French descent had melted and blended by a complete assimilation of the English point of view."

"The 'Follies' under his baton, never lost that graceful touch of the French, and his personal charm was the distinctive charm. They foundered knew this, and wisely preserved it as an asset quite as valuable as their all-round competence. They were the sublimation of that rare phenomenon, a group of gifted friends entertaining everybody else by first entertaining themselves."

Cured Eczema Like Magic

Suffered for Years—Tried All Kinds of Treatment—Surprised at Results From Dr. Chase's Ointment.

You can soon tell when people are enthusiastic about medical treatment by the language they use. After experimenting with all sorts of ointments and cure, the writer of this letter was astonished at the quick and satisfactory results obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

"I worked like magic," she writes. Indeed, it is surprising the healing that is often effected in a single night by this great ointment. The stinging and itching are relieved at once, and cure is only a matter of time and patient treatment.

Mrs. Clements, 13 Strange street, Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have suffered from eczema for years, and after using all kinds of ointments, at last tried Dr. Chase's Ointment. It worked like magic and proved a God-send to me. I would advise anyone suffering from eczema to try one box and be convinced." 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Annoying Dandruff

Will Make Canada a Bald-Headed Nation If Not Checked.

Mr. Pasteur, the great French physician, once said: "I believe we shall some day rid the world of all diseases caused by germs."

Dandruff is caused by germs, a fact accepted by all physicians. Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. If it were not for the little destructive germs working with a persistence worthy of a better cause, there would be no baldness.

Parian Sage will kill the dandruff germs and remove dandruff in two weeks or money back. It will stop itching scalp, falling hair and make the hair grow thick and abundant.

It puts life and lustre into the hair and prevents it from turning gray. It is the hair dressing par excellence, daintily perfumed and free from grease and stickiness. It is the favorite of the world of taste and culture who know the social value of fascinating hair.

Comes in large 50-cent bottle at all druggists and leading toilet goods counters everywhere. "The Girl with the Auburn Hair" is on every package.
