Sir William Osler, in a recent lecture at Johns Hopkins Training School, named the seven virtues of the nurse: "Tact, without which no woman can be successful and her chief protection in the mechanism of life; tidiness, it being the primary duty of a woman to look well; tactfulness, which should be cultivated as a gift; sympathy, gentleness, the birthright of a nurse; cheerfulness and charity, the last and greatest of all."

A SHEAF OF GOOD STORIES

NOT SCIENTIFIC!

Sir Ernest Shackleton tells some good stories about Mr. George Marston, a member of his expedition and part author of a book on "Antarctic Days" (Melrose, 6s. net). "On our expedition," he says, "we had a learned professor and geologist who has undoubtedly a reputation for extreme politeness. Marston met the professor one day laden with specimens of rock in a bag. Said Marston to the professor, 'Can I carry your bag?' 'Oh, don't trouble Marston, really it is too good of you; but somehow or other the 50lb. bag was transferred to Marston's broad and willing shoulders. Instead of being content with the hail of rocks, the professor began picking up more of the debris scattered along the mountain side, and the 50lb. bag soon became 60lb. Marston thought he had had about enough of it, so every time the professor knelt down to coax rock out of its surrounding ice I saw Marston discharging from the bag a rock of similar size and weight. The professor arrived at the hut fondly imagining that he had got everything he had worked for, and received with profuse thanks the bag from Marston. For this reason I say that Marston is not a scientific man."

POLAR POLITENESS.

Polar politeness differs from icy frigidity as will be seen from another story. The party had been marching over dangerously crevassed ground where there were chasms and pitfalls at every step, and had come to camp. The professor went outside the tent leaving Marston inside. Suddenly Marston heard a polite voice saying: "Hello!" "Are you very busy, Marston?" came the polite, distant voice. "Yes, I am; what do you want?" came the gruff reply. "Really busy, Marston?" quavered the reed-like notes. "What do you want?" replied Marston. "Well, if you are not too busy, I am down a crevasse and I cannot hold on much longer." So much for Antarctic politeness.

FIRST-CLASS LECTURES.

As nearly everybody knows, says Sir Ernest, the penguin is a bird and pemmican is a food, and when at the end of one of my lectures my chairman, making a few laudatory remarks, said, "We thank you so much for your lecture, Sir Ernest, we love to see the moving pictures with the dear little penguins running about," he was almost as bad as the old clergyman who, after I had given the lecture, which I must say I was rather pleased with, got up and said, "I thank you for your lecture; the photographs were lovely." But one gets hardened to these things. Once having lectured at a very famous public school and receiving a good fee, I wrote to an equally famous rival public school suggesting that a fee of the same proportion would satisfy me if they liked to hear my lecture. The answer that I got was: "Dear Sir: This is five times as much as we pay to even first-class lecturers."

KELVIN AND BLACKIE.

The late Lord Kelvin, then Professor Thompson, though popular with his students, used to tax their brains to breaking point, as no ordinary undergraduate could follow his flights of mathematical exaltation. When the professor was summoned to London to receive the honor of knighthood, the class was taken by the assistant, Mr. Day, whose lectures were particularly welcome; and the students profited accordingly. On the morning before Sir William's return a facetious scholar wrote the following inscription on the blackboard: "Work ye while it is Day. For the Knight cometh when no man can work."

And that reminds me of a Blackie story. The professor wrote on the board: "Mr. Blackie will meet his classes" at a certain time. A wag rubbed out the first letter and it read that he would meet his "lasses." Blackie saw this and amended it still further by rubbing out the "l" and the general opinion was that the equation had been reduced to its simplest terms.

THE EASIER JOB.

A well-known but broken down Detroit newspaperman, says the Detroit Free Press, who had been a power in his day, approached an old friend the other day in the Pontchartrain Hotel and said: "I have just received the prize of my life. A paper down in Muncie, Ind., offered me a job. 'Do you call that an insult?' 'Not the job, but the salary.' They offered me twelve dollars a week." "Well," said the friend, "twelve dollars a week is better than nothing." "Twelve dollars a week—thunder!" exclaimed the old scribe. "I can borrow more than that right here in Detroit."

PLAYING FOR SAFETY.

The Irish car-driver can be complimentary when it seems to suit his purpose. An old lady was getting into a car one day in Dublin (says Hervey's "Irish Life and Humor"), and finding it a somewhat difficult job she turned to the driver with the request, "Help me in my good man, for I'm very old." "Begorra, ma'am," was Pat's gallant reply, "no matter what age you are you don't look it."

Fuel Economy

Knight Engine v. Poppet Valve Engine.

In the second advertisement of this series, we proved conclusively that the Knight Engine developed greater efficiency in operation than the Poppet Valve engine of similar horsepower.

In this advertisement we will show that the Knight Engine developed 50% greater power at 20% less cost than did the Poppet Valve engine. The figures are taken from the report of the judges of the R. A. C. of Great Britain and the Automobile Club of America.

Knight Engine.

88 h.p. R. A. C. rating.
Maximum h.p. attained: 57.25 h.p. for five hours.
Average h.p. maintained: 54.3 h.p., or 141% of its rated load of 38 h.p.

Poppet Valve Engine.

6-cylinder, 38 h.p. A. L. A. M. rating.
Maximum h.p. attained: 44.9 h.p. for three minutes.
Average h.p. maintained throughout test: 35.7, or 93% of its rating of 38 h.p.

Knight Engine.

Knight motor gasoline consumption for each h.p., .613 lbs.

Report on Gasoline:

Gasoline consumption for each h.p., .801 lbs.

Poppet Valve Engine.

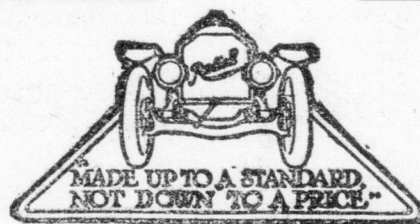

The Knight engine used 25% less gasoline to develop the same horsepower as the Poppet Valve engine. In point of economy of gasoline consumption, therefore, it was 25% more efficient, proving that a Knight engine of equivalent horsepower costs on an average 25% less to run than does a Poppet Valve engine.

The result of this test alone bears out the claims we have made for the past four years on behalf of the Knight Motor.

We want every owner or prospective owner of an automobile to read these advertisements, because for four years we have claimed for the Knight Engine economy both of fuel and oil. The comparative figures of the two tests go to show how far our claims have been justified.

Nova Scotia an amusing story of how a schoolboy, under pressure of time, had only two minutes left to do it in; and this is what he wrote:

Henry VIII was King of England and the greatest widower that was. He was born on a place called Annie Domino, and he had 350 wives. The first was beheaded and then executed, the second was revoked, and the third died, and then he married Ann Bulletin.

NOT THE "DAY OF REST."

The Bishop of London, speaking at the annual meeting of the Navy Mission Society at Church House, Westminster, told the following story to illustrate the difficulty sometimes met with by missionaries among the working class.

"A curate goes to a house," he said, "and knocks timidly at the door. He hears a voice shout: 'Who's there, Sally?' and Sally replies: 'Please, mother it is 'religion.'"

"It requires a little bit of tact for a man to do what he ought to do when he is ushered in as 'religion' on washing-day."

TACT.

The "Musical Standard" says the following occurred in a bookseller's shop: Enter a gentleman of foreign appearance: "Libretto Mikado." Assistant (without musical knowledge): "No speak Italiano."

"I was in a Missouri town two years ago," said a local dramatic producer, "trying to get up a show. The landlord of the chief and only hotel seemed half-way intelligent and I interviewed him, as a preliminary. 'Your town boasts a band, does it not?' I asked. 'Well, no, stranger,' he responded. 'We've got a band, but we don't boast of it. We just endure it.'"

THE KAISER BURNS A HISTORIC LETTER.

An entirely unknown historical incident, illustrative of the Emperor's keen sense of responsibility as a constitutional monarch, was revealed by Dr. Hintze in his lecture at the Berlin University in connection with the Kaiser's jubilee.

On the day of the Emperor's accession he found on his desk a package left by his father, with the order that it was to be given to his son after his death. It contained a letter written by the Emperor's great-uncle, Frederick William IV, the first constitutional ruler of Prussia, which the monarch had ordered to be handed to each of his successors immediately on his accession, one of them should give effect to the appeal contained in the letter.

This was that the "new occupant of the throne should overthrow the constitution before taking the accession oath." The emperor's grandfather and father had received and disregarded the letter. The present Emperor went further, as he told Dr. Hintze in relating the story some years ago. He weighed the possibility that some young and inexperienced monarch might one day receive the letter on whom it would exercise a fatal influence. "I felt," said his majesty, "as if I had a powder barrel in the house, and could not rest till the letter was destroyed." It was accordingly burnt by the Emperor's order.
