Woodstock, Dec. 16.—The O. H. A. season in the "Big Six" group of the O. H. A. intermediate series will open on Jan. 4 with Ingersoll at Tavistock and London at Tillsonburg.

The schedule for group No. 8 was drawn up here this afternoon with the convener Frank Hyde. in charge. With drawn up here this afternoon with the convener, Frank Hyde, in charge. With six teams in the group, and three of these not represented at the meeting, drawing up of the schedule was a hard proposition. However, the absent clubs were well looked after.

Tavistock secured the dates requested, and concessions were made to all the clubs not represented. The schedule is a long one, the playing season opening on Jan. 4 and closing on Feb. 8. The matter of naming referees was not dealt with, the delegates and convener preferring to leave the appointing of referees to the secretary of the O. H. A.

shot to death in Stanwix hall, a resort long since gone.

Some years ago, when at the height of his fame, the great middleweight. Stanley Ketchelt, was shot and killed in the middle west by a farmhand whose enmity the fighter had incurred. This concludes the list of well-known fighters who have died with their boots on outside the ring. Norman Selby (Kid McCoy) was on the other end of a shooting, and is now serving his sentence out west.

Mathewson. He came closer to being the perfect pitcher than any man that has thrown a ball over the plate. Mathewson is the pitchers, the one man they try to model after. He had everything that a pitcher should have—a curve ball, a slow one, a fast one, a fadeaway. He pitched with little effort and he had the greatest gift a pitcher can possess—control. Mathewson's control was near perfect. He had the needed intelligence and the heart; he studied his batsmen and knew their weaknesses; he always pitched to them. Every time Mathewson started a ball for the plate it meant something. He was never found wanting when the test came.
