THE ICE MAN KICKS.

Now Bicycles are Blamed for Less of His Business

Keen disgust was pictured in his almost savage look. There was no doubt about it, the liveryman was mad. Somehow or other the world was out ef joint as he saw it. "Won't Laurier make you rich, old man? Cheer up," quoth a loafer who generally filled a chair at the livery stable door.

"Not as I figure it. Free trade'll be "Not as I figure it. Free trade'll be the straw to break this camel's back, and leave his creditors in a hole, too." "Cheer up, old man. What's free trade to do with you?"

"Make bicycles cheaper, that's all. An' here I ain't had a horse out for a week, of these moonlight nights. Darn me, if I didn't see a liveryman himself ridin' a wheel to-day.' "He deserves to lose his business, don't he. old man?" "And what do you fellows think? An iceman was kicking to me to-day about them wheels. Says they rob him of business, too. Where he used to sell 1,500 pounds of ice to ——'s ice cream parlors, he don't sell a Cottenhond street, opposite R. C. Street, opposite R. ice cream parlors, he don't sell a third of it. Blames it on them wheels, Well, boys, I'm not sorry for my creditors, for bless me if they don't ride wheels, too."
