

THE LABOR TROUBLES.

The strikes bringing slowly along the Grand Trunk Railway conductors and brakemen successful.

The strikers in the city go on unimpeded. Many of the striking carpenters are leaving the city. The deputations of railroad men who went to Montreal to see Mr. Hickson returned with the good news that their wages were to be raised.

THE CARPENTERS. The meeting in Temperance hall yesterday morning was not so large as it has been on previous occasions. The meeting was of shorter duration than the meetings have been previously. Mr. Moore was in the chair; Mr. Ross secretary.

The chairman said that the concert committee had received the different parties to make returns of the tickets they had received. It was intended to have another concert, but the affairs of the last one had to be concluded before another was entered upon.

A letter from Rev. Mr. Rainsford was read stating that he had called on the mayor to arrange for a meeting between the carpenters and the master carpenters, but that there would be no meeting, as the master carpenters had published a statement in which they declared that they would not accept of the terms offered by the carpenters.

The chairman said that after this last meeting he had called on the mayor to arrange for a meeting between the carpenters and the master carpenters, but that there would be no meeting, as the master carpenters had published a statement in which they declared that they would not accept of the terms offered by the carpenters.

crease in wages from Mr. Hickson returned yesterday. They were received very cordially, and Mr. Hickson promised to grant the increase. Brakemen over two years in the service will receive $2 75 per day, and those who have been over six months in the service $1 40 per day. Conductors who have been over two years in the service will receive $2 50 per day, and all under that period will receive $2 per day.

LABOR NOTES. The painters will hold a grand concert at Albert hall on Tuesday night. The laborers' union met last night and transacted routine business, but nothing so far as could be learned, of an important nature was done.

The tinmiths met last night at Temperance hall for regular business, and the discussion of the labor question under its various aspects. The employers have at length consented to take the shoemakers bill of wages into consideration, and there will be a meeting between both parties this afternoon to discuss the bill.

At Cohoes, N. Y., the Harmony mills were entirely closed yesterday. Seventy-five men have thus far left the city to accept positions elsewhere, and others are preparing to follow. There is no excitement.

ABOUT THE STRIKES. To THE WORLD: A salient feature of the present movement is the want of a just appreciation on the part of the men, not merely of the strength and resources of the enemy as personified by the masters, but of the far-reaching influences of a considerable rise in wages, and of the social condition which environ the employers, compelling them in self-defence to resist the demands of the men.

It is a great mistake to suppose that the rate of wages is simply a question between the employers and the men. It is only a limited extent a question of the just division of the profits resulting from the joint action of capital and labor, for if for example the master builders were making excessive profits in comparison with the profits on other industries, so much capital would be invested in building that there would be a competition for the artisan, whose wages would rise by virtue of the increased demand, and the evil would furnish its own remedy; nor could any very serious disturbance be given by permanently enforced by the joint action of masters and men in any given industry; social exigencies might render such a combination powerful for a time, but the large number of men to such an over-crowding of the industry from neighboring countries that not only would the combination be broken up, but the operators, like masters and men, would be so far in excess of local requirements, that capital would be withdrawn and labor without employment.

Every intelligent carpenter knows that if wages were suddenly put up to six dollars a day, one of two things would happen—either there would be little employment, the community trying to do without carpenter's work, or there would be an enormous influx of carpenters from all over the country and the States, and in the over-crowded labor market wages would fall.

It is only necessary that this self-evident proposition be distinctly realized, that the men be made to perceive that in demanding an advance of twenty-five to thirty per cent on current rates they may not only have demanded an advance which the employers cannot prudently accede to, but that if acceded to they may result to their own detriment by over-crowding the labor market in that branch.

A rise of twenty-five to thirty per cent in wages means a very serious disturbance of values all round. The value of any article in general demand is not what it costs, but what it can be reproduced for, and a rise of twenty-five per cent in carpenters', bricklayers' and painters' wages, means a corresponding rise in the value of all existing buildings with corresponding advance in rents.

The influence of the N. E. in raising the cost of all imported articles, and of the newly developed cattle export trade, in raising the price of meat, has enhanced the cost of living, rendering it necessary an advance of wages to maintain the equilibrium existing before these influences were active in disturbing values. Buildings must cost more, and stockkeepers must be prepared to pay more rent as a set off to the freer circulation of money, of the advantages of which they reap their full share. The demand for an increase is too well grounded to admit of dispute, but if the men have demanded more than the employers can afford to accede to, they will only prejudice their own best interests.

Nothing can justify a strike but a well-grounded confidence success. FAIR PLAY. At 10.30 last night Sergeants Duncan and Seymour went to No. 21 Richmond street and arrested Jane Harding on a warrant charging her with keeping a disorderly house. Three men, Wm. Burns, Henry Clark and John Tracy, were found in the house and taken in charge as being frequenters of the place. The whole four were locked up at police headquarters. There is also a charge of selling liquor without a license against the keeper of the place.

Le Voyage En Suisse. The Fanlon Brothers at the Grand opera house drew another good audience last night. This is positively one of the best attractions that Manager Sheppard has furnished the present season. The scenery is very fine and the company first-class all round. The drama (or absurdity) is replete with laughable and peculiar incidents, which are not to be met with in anything we have yet seen on the stage. Le Voyage will be continued all week, with a Saturday matinee. "See the players well bestowed."

The Whisky Menace. At the entrance to the south passage of the pavilion last night a short blonde man over thirty, well dressed, his plug hat somewhat battered, and wearing a long light moustache. He annoyed everyone within ten yards of him by his "bravos" and ill-timed applause, and his whiskey-laden breath poisoned the atmosphere was simply unbearable. He could not keep quiet for two minutes at a time, and was running in and out of the lobby in the quiet passages. He was a disgrace to himself and a nuisance to the public.

A Civil Service Deal. Mr. A. is in the Ontario civil service, who had it in his head to go to the Northwest. Mr. B. was already in the civil service, and heard of Mr. A.'s desire. So he went to A. and said: "I'll give you $300 if you resign." A. agreed; then B. went to his political friends and told them of the deal, and that if they worked it right they could get him promoted into A.'s place. This having come to the ears of the chief of the department he discharged A. did not promote B., but gave the post to an outsider.

BRIEF LOCALS.

Mr. Peck-Graham, M. P., is a guest at the Walker house. The loss by the Credit Valley fire will not exceed $50,000. Mr. John Little of Malvern has presented a fox to the zoo.

Forty horses for the mounted police arrived from the east yesterday. About sixty new members of the Tenth Royal Grenadiers were drilled last night. Mr. J. McT. Ross of Leslieville is in danger of losing his teeth, owing to having three teeth extracted a few days ago. He is unable to open his mouth.

Mrs. Lynch wants $3000 damages from the corporation of Leghew's town claims that her leg was broken by a defective sidewalk on Carleton street in that suburb. About forty of the striking carpenters quit the Northwest yesterday for Credit Valley railway. A large number of their friends were at the depot to say good-bye.

John Ward, dairyman, made yesterday a donation of $3 to the Harmonic society on account of their praiseworthy efforts and successful action at the fire yesterday. Mr. N. H. Weinberg fell out of a buggy on Monday morning on Yonge street in Yorkville, near the toll gate, breaking his collar bone and cutting a deep gash in the side of his head.

On Monday a small boy while playing around the park school at recess broke his arm, and it is expected that he will be confined to a hospital for some time. A number of false alarms were rung yesterday, and the result was a very bad party had a troublesome time in trying to find the cause. At least accounts he has not succeeded in making root for fifty miles. Jamieson the clothier has filed his new extensive establishment with a new and fancy stock of tweeds, worsteds and goods, and is ready to make root for fifty miles. Yesterday being the festival in St. Mark's church, the services were held in the Anglican and Roman Catholic churches. In the latter the litany of the saints was sung in procession. In the Anglican churches morning prayer was held, and the celebration of the holy communion in a few.

MUSIC AT THE PAVILION.

"Acis and Galatea" and "Preciosa" by the Philharmonic society last night goes a long way to show the great and growing interest taken in music, not only by the performers but by the citizens of Toronto generally. As on entered the pavilion of the gardens at night, he was struck with the appearance on the platform of such an array of beauty surrounded by their not less enthusiastic fellow vocalists in their contrasting black and sombre-looking dresses.

It must have been gratifying to Mr. Toronto, the indefatigable conductor, to have secured such a success, and we may now say that it is one more added to his list of master triumphs. The concert opened with Hand's serenata, Acis and Galatea, which was immediately followed by the opera of Preciosa by Weber. The overture to Acis is a very beautiful piece of work which is nicely interspersed with runs between the vocalists and the orchestra and is a very pretty effect. This the orchestra gave in a full and broad manner. From this the instrumentalists went on to the chorus "O, the Pleasures of the Plains." The next number, a recitative and air, "Hush, ye Pretty Warbling Chorus," and song by Miss McManus, is really a gem, and was given by her in a pleasing manner. Being the first solo on the program it may have had an effect on the audience, which was not to be expected. The case if it had come last, as was shown by her in the very pleasing style in which she sang it.

"Preciosa" "Lonely am I now no longer." Then followed the solo, "Where Shall I Seek the Charming Fair," by Her. Fried, who fairly earned the applause bestowed on him by the audience. After that came a solo by Mr. Taylor, who appeared quite by the way, perhaps because he came on top of Her. Fried and partly by the difference of voice in the two gentlemen, one being German and the other English. Her. Fried "brought" the house by his rendering of "Love in Her Eyes Sits Play-fully."

Miss Nellie Hillary was well received on her giving a very pretty and showy air, "When the Heart is True." The duet, "Happy We," led on to the chorus following, the rendition of which showed a careful fitness to the happy and joyous words of the lyrics. The grand chorus, "Wretched Lovers," was perhaps the most difficult in the whole concert. To lead the melodious steps of the giant followed by a dead silence, and Polypheme's roar kept up by the basses and the "Hercules" from the other voices, was simply superb.

Mr. Warrington sang with a good deal of force and spirit. "Buddler that Cherry" but it was hardly what it should have been. The trio of Mrs. Baxter, Her. Fried and Mr. Warrington, was very pretty and gave satisfaction. The chorus "Mourn, All ye Muses" was a very pretty and descriptive work, and was greatly appreciated by the audience, as also Mrs. Baxter's solo and the chorus following "Cass, Galathea, Cease to Grieve." Miss Berriman sang the air "Heart, the N. of Soft Delights" in a very nice style. "Galatea, Dry Thy Tears" chorus was given well and was received by the audience in a very enthusiastic manner.

The opera Preciosa opened the second part of the program. It abounds with very pretty airs and most of the work is done by the orchestra. The only solo was taken by Miss McManus, who greatly pleased the audience by the manner in which she sang it. The grand chorus, "Wretched Lovers," was perhaps the most difficult in the whole concert.
