DYNAMITE IN LONDON.

AN EXPLOSION ON THE UNDER-GROUND RAILWAY.

A Train Lord of Passengers Terrified-

No One Hurt—Shattered Glassware. Trains Delayed. LONDON, Jan. 2.—A dynamite explosion occurred in the underground railway be- vailing tween Gower street and King's cross station at 9.30 this evening. The windows of a passing train were shattered and the gaslights extinguished. Beyond this no interview with Andrew Carnegie of the damage was done. The passengers were Edgar Thomson steel works and many

The passengers were greatly alarmed, and many ladies fainted Gowel street platform was literally strewn with the forms of persons prostrated by the Houses in the vicinity were shaken and the roadway oscillated. Two trains were passing each other at the time and in both the lights were extinguished, the windows were shattered and the framework of several carriage doors smashed. The green, red and white lights at the front and rear of the trains were extinguished. The ticket collector at Gower street station describes the report of the explosion as sharp and ringing in character, like the discharge of a small piece of field artillery. The point where the explosion occurred is directly under the road leading to the main entrance of the London and North-western railway station. A lady's nose was cut by glass and one gentleman had his side and face, and another his wrist cut; these were the most serious casualties reported. the most serious casualties reported. All the passengers left the trains at Gower street station. Many were in a half faintof Scotland yard, and superintendents and at Gower street station half an hour afte the explosion and immediately proceeded down the line. They discovered the signa tially wrecked, the signal wire separated and the clock stopped at fourteen minutes past nine. Close inspection showed the explosive could not have been gunpowde as the surrounding brickwork was not blackened. It must therefore have been either dynamite or gun cotton. The local ity of the explosion is on the north side of the line unidway between St. Paneras church and Charlton street. The only clues are a few fragments of paper which were found s rewn about the track.

damage was done. The passengers were greatly terrified, but no one was hurt. The train resumed its journey after a delay of twenty-five minutes.

The shock of the explosion was felt by residents of Euston road between St. Pancras church and Judd street. The railway runs the whole length of Euston road underneath the roadway. A crowd speedily colletted at the Vent shaft at the time of the explosios, a quantity of smoke issued. As soon as possible after the explosion, a number of porters were sent to the spot with lamps and appliances for clearing the line. Up to the present time nothing has been found. The residents in the locality were greatly alarmed.

The shock overthrew several wayfarers on Euston road. It was with great difficulty that horses on the road were restrained from running away. The gaslights in the Gower street station were extinguished. The ticket collector in the station was thrown from his box and the engineer working the lectric light manufacture.

Men will be content to work for the general welfare, and share their riches with their neighbors." Are you prepared now to divide your wealth? was asked. Carnegie replied, "No, not at present; but I do not spend much on myself. I give away every year seven or eight times as much as I spend for personal comforts and pleasures. Working people have my full sympathy, and I always extend a helping hand. I am a workingman, and in my young days worked in a cotton mill and ran an engine. Brigneli was the vainest man I ever knew. His last appearance in this city occurred. I believe, in 1880, at the Academy of Music, and he then sang only once—Edgardo to the Lucia of M'lie Valleria. He was at the height of his glory when the academy opened in 1856, and he received not less than a $10.0 a month for his services, which were highly prized by managers because Brignoli was the idol of fashionable society. Young gils adored him, and even matrons looked u on him with softeyed wonder, and thought it no weakness to send flowers to his rooms. He was, however, the most selfish of men, and never com titud any evesses. He printited ladies to aim rehim, but his devotion to the proudest and most beautiful of them never took him out of doors on a wet night to the peril of his voice. His own person was more in his thoughts than the caresses of women. His inordinate vanity taught him to treat the whole sex as his natural subjects, and not to make particular victims of any of its members. He would probably have found many had he looked for them

How the Cartoon in Punch is Made.

From Good Words.

The subject of the political cartoon is fixed by r suggested to Mr. Tenniel at the weekly Punch dinner on Wednesday. On Thursday he puts into definite shape his thoughts on the no draws and finishes his design competery on the wood, ready for the engraver. This is no light task, and involves a very great mental strain. Mr. Tenniel must be abreast of the topics of the day, and kee ly alive to the many varying currents of public opinion, and ape must always with at his pressure, with the absolute necessity upon him of having his
