"The act of Parliament is a very stringent one," went on the spokesman, "and the company met with a good deal of opposition. It was only after satisfying the Government as to the bonafides of the undertaking that we were granted a charter. We are prepared to add a clause to the agreement, stating that the power is to be brought from Georgian Bay."

When he got to expatiating on the cheapness of the power which the company would supply, Ald. Lamb was again on his track.

"Are you aware," said he, "that the last tender of the Toronto Electric Light Company, after deducting the expenses of the linemen, is actually less than one cent per horse-power per hour?"

Mr. Coatsworth: I have not seen any analysis.
