

NOTES.

A St. Paul architect has won a case in court to recover his fees for making and furnishing plans, the jury deciding a question specifically put to them that the architect did not agree to cut his fee. The decision is a welcome one in more ways than one. There seems to be a somewhat general impression that it is perfectly proper for a possible builder to go shopping around for plans, and to secure sketches on the same terms that samples of dress goods are secured from departmental stores. The architect's work is not appreciated by the general public and it seems to be taken as a matter of course that if the proposed building is not erected, there is little obligation to the architect. A few more wholesome court decisions, as a means of enforcing the fact that the architect's work should be paid for, whether the client builds or not, would be quite educational as well as very satisfactory.

The Paschall Interlocking System of Steel Beam Construction for Sidewalk Prisms is unequalled

Because on account of its structural formation it has greater strength for its weight than any other known sidewalk construction. The grooved bar and cement interlock in such a manner that any separation of iron and cement is impossible.
