The arts and cultural industries play a key role in projecting an image of Canada abroad, that of an innovative, multi-cultural and tolerant nation shaped by its roots, its history, and the vastness of the land.

The projection of Canadian values and culture is a priority of Canada's foreign policy.

As such, the Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade promotes the Canadian cultural sector and its successes around the world.

Dedicated specialists in the Arts and Cultural Industries Promotion Division provide assistance to the cultural sector through a grant program and an international business development program.
