

you will give, as well as receive, you will find that humanity is planned upon the great principle of reciprocity and that the words of the Master are ever true, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Besides those things which come into life's definite plans, there are countless opportunities all along the way for doing little acts of kindness and helpfulness which are of untold value. We may not be called to great service, but as Christians we are called to a sympathetic interest in those who are, and it is our duty to help them when we can. The widow of Sarepta could not beard Ahab or shake Israel, but she could bake bread for the prophet Elijah, who could and did do both.

"It is the duty, as it should be the privilege, of every one who acknowledges himself to be a disciple of Jesus Christ, to do with all his heart whatever his hand finds to do; and if the 'whatever' should be confined to the little ministries of life, the
