Schubert Choir and Nordica

Every season the Schubert Choir for some years has been depended upon to furnish two excellent concerts, and last night Mr. Fletcher redeemed his gauge with the pleasantest program he had yet presented. There was variety in profusion, to suit all tastes, and pienty of it, and the audence, which flied Massey Hall, was eager and approving and demanded more all the time. With an almost too lavish generosity they received it, and encores were the order of the evening.

The program included soprano soloist, bass soloist, orchestra, choir and orchestra, choir a capella, male voices bass Myron G. Whitney, and Mr. Welsman's Symphony Orchestra provided the instrumental fare. Madam Nordica has been long before the public and grows in favor. was in excellent voice last night and the audience could not have enough of her. She responded again and again to the encores with a goodnature which Patti herself never excelled, and the famous diva used to be a record encore artist. But even Patti only sang simple and well-known bal-lags, and Nordica drew on a new and extensive repertoire last night in the most charming way. Her first appearance was the signal for a most cordial welcome. She came on to sing Sir Edward Elgar's plaintive lyric, "Will You Come Homeward," and the exquisite art and pathos of the performance won her hearers at once. The Omaha Indian Tribal Melody which followed was delivered with an artless freshness and beauty as delicate as a wind-flower. The applause was imperative and she sang it again.

"Damon," by Mrs. Stange, was colored with trills and shakes brilliantly sweet in execution, and for an encore she sang Mrs. Beach's fine setting of Browning's "The Years at the Spring." This sprited lyric was also encored and Nevin's pretty luliaby "Mighty Like a Rose," warmed the audience to still another demonstration. Later Madam Nordica sang the aria "One Fine Day," from Puc-cini's "Madam Butterfly," with dra-matic feeling. As an encore she gave the brilliant "Mattinata" by Leoncavallo, and when that was encored, Rogers' "Parting"—"The Sweetest Flower That Blows." Madam Nordica's next suite included Claude De-bussy's eifin "Mandoline," the music of which is as tricksy as a butterfly's flight. The technical resources of the singer seemed inexhaustible and she repeated the number on demand. Then followed the pure melody of riandel's great air, "Angels Ever Bright and Fair," which she sang with a divine and tender purity. Another contrast brought the dramatic intensity of Schumann's "Waldesgesprach," a companies of dishedie to the "Erl panion piece of diabledie to the "Erl King," which she is to sing to-night.

Another encore brought Liza Leh-mann's charming version of "I know HOPE—GREENING — At St. Thomas' mann's charming version of "I know Church, Hamilton, on Saturday, Feb. 18, 1911, by Rev. E. J. Etherington, Mrs. Florence L. Greening to George thope, both of Hamilton." To-night she will sing the heavy sclo work in Rossini's "In-flammatus." To-night she will sing
