Shoe

A simple line drawing of a foot stepping onto a rectangular trap. The foot is shown from the side, with the heel and ball of the foot visible. The trap is a flat, rectangular object with a slightly raised edge. The drawing is minimalist, using only black outlines on a white background.

es. Where? Everywhere in the straitjacket, but principally in the toes. They are not made wide enough, nor high enough, nor are they shaped like the foot. They are on the bottom, soft, collapsible and shaped to the front point of the shoe. They taper, squeeze, pinch, twist, pull. What happens to these toes? They rot, and other pain-producers develop. The only real reform in shoe toe construction high and so formed precisely like the toes which inhibit them never to curl except by voluntary muscular action on which they lie flat, and free And the aqshed roof over them is their shoes. It's a canopy of pliable leather from stubbornly, relieving the toes and maintaining the shoe's box toe
