BILLBOARD NIGHTMARES.

Ought there not to be in every wellgoverned city a censorship of billboards based on aesthetic as well as moral considerations? Much is heard spaces, and even waste places, attractive, is steadily growing. But there is sheets that are so lavishly displayed wherever room can be found for them.

The Right Hon. Arnold Morley, British postmaster-general in Mr. Glad- is dearer in the west than in the from a month's holiday in Florida, remarked that "it seems to me that your people's morals would be better served by an autocratic censor of bill posters than by wasting time and money east corner of Yonge-street was bought trying to abolish racetrack gambling." nue. To judge from some of the posters on the boardings in your city jus now, it would be rather interesting to see some of the rejected efforts." This is in its measure just as true of Toronto, whose street amenity is otherwise so justly praised. If the aesthetic taste can be educated, as is admitted, even posters have their influence, and there is no reason why it ought not to

"One is that the old The total majority of the Whitney prefer a general election in Premier Scott's province. "One is that the old convenient method of preparing the lists upon which the election will be held is the same under which the famous 'thin red line' racket was worked—an advantage that was not available in Ontario or Quebec. The other is that there is a possibility of arousing religious sectarian cries that might be used to rally to the support of Mr. Laurier an element in Quebec that has shown signs of drifting away.
