The Captain of the Kansas

By Louis Tracy.

Entered according to Act of Parliament in the year nineteen hundred and seven, by McLeod & Allen, at the Department of Agriculture.

Elsie found, to her amazement, that there was less sense of danger in facing the wind than in being driven along before it. Moreover, she had greater confidence during this second transit over the exposed portion of the deck. The old Courtenay, dragging her on irresistibly until they gained the lee of the smoking room. He let her rest there, beneath the ladder leading to the bridge. Then a strange revulsion of feeling came to him. He experienced an overwhelming desire not to be parted from her; he had a sickening fear that he might never see her again; so he shouted, very close to her cheek:

"Would you like to sit in my cabin a little while, if I bring Miss Baring?"

She thought that would be splendid. Courtenay, if any one, would succeed in calming Elsie. In order to make herself heard, she, in turn, had to put her lips quite near to Courtenay's face.

"Yes," she cried, "I shall be only too pleased. But be patient with her; she is very frightened."

There is no accounting for the workings of a man's mind. Courtenay, at no time a lady's man, most certainly had other matters to attend to just then. Yet here he was thinking only of a woman's comfort. His dimmed forebodings were banished by a rush of absurd delight at the thought that he would have an opportunity of speaking to her occasionally. What a brave girl she was! What a wife for a sailor! In truth, there were many notions that floated in his brain when his life and hers were not worth an hour's purchase. He drew her to the foot of the ladder.

"Run ahead, dear!" he cried. The dog, a weird little figure leaning forward at a ridiculous angle against the tearing wind, obeyed instantly. "Now, you," he said to Elsie, "but wait until I pass you at the top."

Though her skirts were troublesome, she managed the ascent. Then she was taken off her feet again, and hardly knew where she was until she found herself in the haven of Courtenay's cabin. Joy was glad to be there, too. He shook himself noisily in his heavy coat.

"You don't mind if I fasten the coat on you?" and the captain so far forgot his anxiety to smile.

"No, indeed," she and smiled in response.

"Very well. I shall bring Miss Baring in about five minutes. You won't stir till we come."

"What? Face that gale without you?" She almost laughed at the idea. He bolted the door, and he ran into the cabin house to tap the barometer. It moved appreciably. It was rising! Ah, if only the wind moderated, he could save the Kansas yet! He glanced at the compass. Still the same course. Not a fraction of a point gained to the north. That was bad. The ship was already within the danger zone. Pray Heaven for a falling wind, or even a change to the southward! Still, it was in an altogether cheerful mood that he regained the promenade deck and made his way toward the saloon.

He was in the very act of entering the doorway when a shudder ran through the ship, and she lifted slightly. Clinging to a rail, he waited, rigid as a statue. A second time the great steel hull shook, but much more violently. Then the Kansas ran her nose into a shoal, swung round broadside to the sea, lifted again, struck heavily, and listed to port.

Courtenay was on the starboard side. He heard a yell of dismay from the men attending to the boats. Screams from the saloon. The sea leaped triumphantly over the rails and nearly smothered him with its dense spray. So this was the end! It had come all too soon. And what a place for the ship to be cast away! Twenty miles from the nearest land, in the midst

VELVET BOW AND AIGRETTE ARE BOOMING TO SOME.

The selection of a becoming and appropriate headpiece should be a matter of careful consideration. There are so many beautiful novelties in these items of feminine adornment that women are often tempted to buy things which are completely at variance with their type of face and mode of dressing the hair. But when in doubt, as many of us frequently are in matters of this kind, choose one of these pretty black velvet bows which so that they may be bent to harmonious lines with the coiffure, and spangled or bedecked with iridescent beads or glittering sequins. The addition of a handsome white or light color aigrette makes a dressier ornament. A pretty idea is to have the sparkling application to the velvet match one's jewelry or costume. For instance, the costume of the picture is trimmed with silver sequins and pearls, beads are worn about the neck, one of the new cuff bracelets of pearls and diamonds encircles the arm, the rings are diamonds and pearls, and tiny rhinestones in clusters of three dot the surface of the black velvet hair bow and mark the stems of the aigrette.

A bullet smashed one of the windows of the music-room and lodged in a panel behind Courtenay. They all heard the engine fall away into deep water. Courtenay happened to be on the bridge; the forward half held intact, so he and the other survivors clambered ashore at low water.

He waited now for the rending of plates, the tearing asunder of staunch steel ribs and cross-beams, which should sound the knell of the ship's last moments. But the Kansas seemed to be in no hurry to fall in pieces. She strained and groaned, and shook violently when a wave pounded her; otherwise, she lay there like a beaten thing, eddies resembling the living but almost unconscious men stretched on the mattresses in the forward saloon.

Courtenay did not experience the least fear of death. Emotion of any sort was already dead in him. He found himself wondering if an unexpectedly strong current, setting to the southeast, had not upset his reckoning—if there were any broken limbs among the occupants of the saloon—if Elsie had been injured by being thrown down into the water. He looked at his watch; it was past eleven. In four hours there would be dawn. Dawn in a few minutes he might see the day that was overhanging.

"Ah! Perhaps not even four minutes!" The Kansas, with a shiver, lifted to the embrace of a heavy sea, lurched to port, and settled herself more comfortably. The deck assumed an easier angle. Now it was possible to walk. There was no rocking any longer. Courtenay at once jumped to the conclusion that the powerful current whose existence he suspected had cut out for itself a deep-water channel towards the land, and the ship had struck on the sill of its backwash. Anyhow, the Kansas was still living. The ship's engine, the rhythmic throb of the donkey-engine. He felt it like the faint beat of a pulse. In his new position the ship presented less of a solid wall to the onslaught of the sea. The tumultuous waves began to race past without breaking so furiously. Had she started her plates? Were the holds and engine-room full of water? If so, Walker and his associates were already drowning beneath his feet. And, when next she moved, the vessel might slip away into the depths!

These and kindred thoughts, thoughts without sequence and almost without number, flew through his mind with incredible speed. They were lucid and reasoned, their prose and sense equally dealt with—he could have answered any question on each point were it propounded by a board of examiners—and all this took place within a few seconds, between the impact of one big wave and another. A man rushed by, he tried to do so. Courtenay recognized him as a leading stoker who had temporary charge of the donkey-boiler and seized him wrathfully, his eyes ablaze.

"Go back!" he roared.

"Senor! The ship is lost!"

"Go back, and await my orders."

He could have strangled the fugitive in his sudden rage. The fireman endeavored to gasp his readiness to obey. Courtenay released his grip and, for a time, at least one member of the crew stuck to his post, fearing the mad captain more than death. A mob of stewards and kitchen hands came in a torrent up the saloon stairs. Courtenay met them, a terrifying figure, and thrust a revolver in their faces.

"Back!" he shouted, or some of you will die here."

Given in their frenzy they believed him. The foremost slunk away, and fought in a new terror with those who would urge them on. Gray, bleeding from a cut across the forehead, knocked down a man who brutally tore Isabel out of his path. Tollemache, a revolver in each hand, set his back against a corner of the saloon at the foot of the stairs.

"I'm with you, captain," he yelled.

Courtenay saw that he had conquered them—for the instant. He raised his hand.

"Behave like men," he cried. "You can go to the bridge to see if it is possible to lower the boats. Each boat's crew will be mustered in turn, passengers and men alike. If you are cowards now you will throw away what chance there is of saving your lives."

His voice rang out like a trumpet. His attitude cowed while it reassured them. Men turned from one to another to ask what the senior captain was saying. They understood much, but they wanted to make sure of their own safety. There were opening. Now that the gates of death were open, he was a god in their eyes—a god who promised life in return for obedience.

A revolver barked twice somewhere on

HIBBARD BEATS "HONEY" FITZ

Fitzgerald Defeated in Boston Mayoralty Election by 2000 Votes.

Boston, Dec. 10.—By the closest and hardest fought election contest which Boston has known for many years the city went Republican today by the narrow margin of a few over 2,000 votes. Postmaster George A. Hibbard being elected mayor over John F. Fitzgerald, Democrat, who was a candidate for re-election.

The revised returns show the following ballot cast for the mayoralty candidates: John A. Coulthurst, Independent League, 15,611; John F. Fitzgerald, Democrat, 38,054; George A. Hibbard, Republican, 38,067.

The city went Republican by a very large majority, somewhat smaller than in previous years, however, due to a hard campaign on the part of the clergy and others in an endeavor to keep the saloons out of the suburbs.

Two features contributed notably to the return of a Republican regime after six years of Democratic power, one being the heavy vote given the Independent League candidate, which greatly lessened the Democratic strength and the other the thorough investigation which for some weeks past has been made by a finance commission into the affairs of city hall, in which evidence has been brought forth alleging irregularities in the purchasing department and in the granting of contracts through which it is claimed the city had lost many thousands of dollars.

While the independent vote proved sufficient to transfer the power from one of the leading parties to the other, it did not, however, come anywhere near the strength expected by those who had based their estimates on the vote on the state campaign, when the Independent League polled a vote bigger than the Democratic party.

ST. PIERRE PAYS TOLL OF THE SEA

During the Season 251 Fishermen Have Been Lost.

Halifax, N. S., Dec. 10.—In the middle of October last the fishing schooner Jacques was with a full cargo of fish and twenty-seven men, left the Newfoundland banks for St. John, P. E. I., after a day's stormy weather. The schooner was coming from France, and at the time grave fears were expressed for the safety of small craft crossing the Atlantic. That these fears were well grounded is proven by the fact that no tidings of the Jacques or her crew have ever been received.

Another victim of the sea is the schooner Croisade, which sailed from St. Pierre two days after the departure of the Jacques. The Croisade had a complement of twenty-two men, and had a valuable cargo of fish. No tidings have been heard from the vessel or crew.

This makes no less than ten vessels lost out of the St. Pierre fleet for the present year, so far, in which some 251 men have been lost.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Tissue, not one weak heart in a hundred, but a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. It is actually diseased. It is almost always simply a matter of the nerve being out of place. It is not a matter of the heart being too strong. Without that the heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys fail. These are the same controlling nerves.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for the cause of all this painful, palpitating, aching, nervous, and weak heart, that it is now a popular prescription—alone directed to these nerves, and it is the only medicine that will restore them to their normal state. If you would have strong Heart, strong stomach, strong nerves, strong kidneys, strong lungs, strong blood, strong muscles, strong bones, strong everything, take Dr. Shoop's Restorative.

OPPOSITION IN VICTORIA

Meetings Being Held in That County and Convention Arrangements Made.

Grand Falls, N. B., Dec. 10.—(Special.)—Despite a heavy downpour of rain and almost impassable roads, more than 100 electors attended a meeting here tonight in support of the provincial opposition. Addresses were given by John Morrisey, M. P. of Newcastle, and H. F. McLeod, mayor of Fredericton.

Mr. McLeod secured the administration for gross extravagance and shameful stealing of public money in connection with the Central and International Railways. He urged the need of reform and of honest administration.

Mr. Morrisey speaking as a Liberal to Liberals, called upon them to vote for Liberal principles and honest administration in provincial affairs. As a Liberal he supports Mr. Hazen because he believed that Mr. Hazen would give the province honest and progressive government.

He showed up the way in which the provincial money had been wasted under the highway act, and pledged that Mr. Hazen's government would continue the largest measure of provincial support for the roads, but would hand over control of them to the municipal councils.

Charles Curless spoke at some length, condemning the administration for its treatment of Victoria county interests, and pledged his support to the opposition. A committee was appointed, with Mr. Curless chairman, and J. L. White secretary, to meet in a few days and appoint delegates to a nominating convention.

An enthusiastic audience was addressed at New Brunswick on Monday night by H. F. McLeod and W. V. Hubbard, and delegates to the convention were appointed.

J. K. Flemming, M. P. P., and T. J. Carter addressed a meeting tonight at Tilley.

Messrs. Morrisey and McLeod will speak in the Perth Opera House tomorrow night, and there will be other meetings in the county this week.

A sailors' concert in the Seamen's Institute last evening was very successful. Mrs. G. Wilton Campbell was in charge. S. L. Corbett presided. Some good talent from the ships helped in the entertainment. Marion Douglas Campbell was a great favorite.
