FAMOUS GOLFER WRITES OF GAME

Says Few Honest With Themselves on Standard of Play.

some new golfer?
It can safely be said that this expression is one of the most hackneyed in golfing parlance, and we can even go further and say that it is one of the most misused. Two critics were discussing the play in the open championship after the event was concluded:

First Critic: When he is on his nobody can beat Blank.
Second Critic: But Dash is the finesi

Second Critic: But Dash is the finest golfer in the world.

For obvious reasons the names of the two players under discussion are omitted, but the remark of the second critic cannot fail to be appreciated.

The Flash of Brilliance.

Of the thousands of people playing golf there are very few who are absolutely honest with themselves as to the standard of their play. The majority pride themselves that their one good round out of fifty is really their true form, and that the remaining forty-nine rounds they were off their game. How much better it would be for all conceined if they would face the truth, as did that famous old golfer (alas: now dead) who came to the conclusion that when he played well he was off lits game!

The second critic expresses in a nutshell a world of truth. It is the player who produces his or her game forty-nine times out of fifty who deserves to win the laurels, and not the one who provides a flash of brilliance on rare occasions.

Every player, good or bad, experi-

Every player, good or bad, experiences certain days on which things go well. If this were not so the game would lose many of its followers. But no player can depend indefinitely upon favorable kicks and other forms of outside assistance, so the grand total must be taken into consideration and not merely the best rounds.

On the days when these players are doing good figures, it will often be round that the weak shot in their round that the weak shot in their game was not wanted as often as usual. The bad putter has probably been approaching particularly well; the direction of the wind may have called forth very few iron shots from the weak iron player; the poor performer near the greens may have had rare occasion to use any of the dreaded weapons: but these players should not gull themselves into thinking that "they were on their game" during the playing of these rounds. Rather let them say their weakness will find them out eventually. In a 36 holes medal competition, played recently over a links with a scratch score of 75, a certain player with a handicap of ten returned a gross score of 74 for his second round. The player in question might be considered over-handicapped until the total of his first round—88—is disclosed.

CRITIC REVIEWS Genuine RECENT SCANDAL Tooke

Considers It Due to Game Being So Highly Commercialized.

(By Henry L. Farrell.) New York, Oct. 20-(United Press) -During the scandal that broke out just before the recent world's series, which resulted in the expulsion from organized baseball of Cozy Dolan and Jimmy O'Connell, the opinion was expressed that the world's series should be sheliched.

Johnson's views should not be given too much emphasis, however, as there is too much vindictive malice in him and he was talking more as a radical enemy of Landis than as a guardian of baseball. Johnson wasn't such a purist in 1919 and 1920 when one of the teams in his league was involved in a mess and he shouldn't be any more willing to wield the club when a team in another league is involved.

It is an admitted fact that the temptation is becoming great for players of slow mental'ty and those of loose morals. Temptations are being offered because the game has been so highly commercialized. The club owners are responsible for that.
