King George's Impartiality in The Matter of Party Politics—The Kaiser and The Poles

(Copyright, 1911, by the Brentwood Company.)

King George is determined to maintain an even still more scrupulous impartiality in the sacrifice by the upper classes of the father or grandmother did before him, for whereas in the two previous reigns the peers most intimately connected, in a non-political way, with the royal family, were permitted to vote as they saw fit, and sometimes against the government measures, none of them took part in the memorable vote the other day which resulted in the sacrifice by the upper classes of their ancient rights to veto legislation enacted by the House of Commons.

Thus, in spite of the extraordinary pressure induced by the leaders of the various political parties to induce every peer possessed of the franchise to vote in the constitutional crisis, either for the one side or for the other, every vote being liable to become the determining factor in the conflict—the Duke of Eife, who is married to the king's eldest sister, and the Duke of Argyll, who is married to the monarch's aunt, Princess Louise, abstained from voting.

So, too, did the king's private secretaries, Lord Knollys and Lord Stamfordham (who was Colonel Sir Arthur Bigge); Lord Farquhar, former master of the royal household, and now an extra lord in waiting to the king; also Lord Esher, lieutenant-governor of the Channel; Lord Shaftesbury, the lord chamberlain of Queen Mary; Lord Venkook, her vice chamberlain, and Lord Balfour of Burgh, who in waiting to the king, all were conspicuous by their absence from either lobby of the House of Lords during the historic division and the counting of votes took place, to determine the fate of the House of Lords.

The Kaiser and The Poles

Baron Joseph Kocziolski's death, at his castle of Sluzewo, in Prussian Poland, serves to recall the important role played by his family in the history of the Polish people, and now an extra lord in waiting to the king; also Lord Esher, lieutenant-governor of the Channel; Lord Shaftesbury, the lord chamberlain of Queen Mary; Lord Venkook, her vice chamberlain, and Lord Balfour of Burgh, who in waiting to the king, all were conspicuous by their absence from either lobby of the House of Lords during the historic division and the counting of votes took place, to determine the fate of the House of Lords.

Practically Banished From Court

Whatever the cause of these consultations between the two empires may have been, the fact remains that immediately afterwards the Kocziolski family, from the grand master of the court, Count August Buleben, an intimation that their presence at court was not desired in the highest quarters until further notice, and that under the circumstances they would do well to remain at their country seat. In fact, they were virtually banished from court, and when husband and wife traveled all the way to Berlin for the purpose of asking an explanation of the emperor, he declined to receive either the one or the other. He had apparently come to the conclusion that the game was "not worth the candle, and that in view of the fact that his intimacy with the baroness exposed him to slanderous stories, connected by his enemies, on her account. That ended the Polish regime at the court of Berlin, and an entire reversal of Prussia's policy towards her Polish province. Polish nationalism has ever since been frowned upon, and every effort devoted to the Germanizing of Prussian Poland, economically and politically, the idea being that the Kaiser's most easterly province, the one nearest the Russian border should be occupied by thoroughly loyal Germans, instead of by disaffected Poles, bent upon recovering by any and every means their national independence.

The Evening Chit-Chat
By RUTH CAMERON

"Went on very prosperously, CONSIDERING, as people say of a young lady's drawing, or a Frenchman's English, or a woman's tragedy, or of the poor little dwarf who works without fingers, or the ingenious sailor who writes with his toes, or generally of any performance which is accomplished by means seemingly inadequate to its production."—Miss Alford.

"Wonder sometimes if that word "considering" doesn't do more harm than any word in the English language.

I have read somewhere that it takes a clever man to succeed, but twice as clever a man to explain why he didn't succeed.

I don't think so.

For there is always some explanatory circumstance which he can work up and hitching "considering" to it, persuade himself, at least, that he really has done wonders, "considering."

"Considering" is the excuse that half success always gives for not being complete success.

"Considering" is the coward's word and the sluggard's self puts up between itself and the truth.

"Considering" is the coward's word and the sluggard's word. When you find yourself thinking that you have done anything pretty well "considering," look out. You are in a frame of mind that is fatal to progress. Ask yourself how well you have done, not "considering," not making allowances, and you will have a far better, if bitter-toned, effort.

If we could only drop the word considering and all its equivalents from our language, I think we would be better off. On the contrary that would be a calamity indeed, for I remember now there are other uses for the word. Sweet and commendable uses.

For I think the really great man is he who is "as tolerant of other people's sins and weaknesses as he is intolerant of his own."

"Considering that she had no mother, I think she is a very good girl."

"Considering that he had no education I think he has succeeded wonderfully."

These are the proper uses of "considering." The more times we use it like that and the fewer times we use it with the first person, the better for our souls' good.

BEATTIE HEARS HIS OWN CONFESSION OF MURDER TOLD ON STAND BY HIS COUSIN

Henry C. Beattie, Jr., Chesterfield Court, House, Aug. 29—Beattie, cousin of Henry C. Beattie, Jr., who stands indicted for the murder of his wife, revealed on the witness stand late today that the accused told him twenty-four hours after the murder how sorry he was "he had done it," a circumstance relating to the crime that the witness hitherto had suppressed.

"Henry had told me that he wanted me to stick by him, but I said to him, 'This looks mighty black to me, and it has got to be a kind of trouble.' Henry replied, 'I wish to God I had not done it; I would not have done it for $100,000, but she never loved me; I only married her for my money.'"

He had previously told of buying the gun at Weinstein's pawn shop and of going there on the night in question and carrying the weapon to the prisoner, who waited in his automobile around the corner. Next day when he saw Henry, said the witness, the prisoner sent him to warn Beulah Binford to keep her mouth closed. Paul quoted Henry as saying:

"Tell her that if she opens her mouth about this thing I'll kill her if it takes 100 years."

Paul said when he delivered the message to the Binford girl said: "I reckon Henry Clay Beattie, jr., will marry me soon, the one nearest the Russian border should be occupied by thoroughly loyal Germans, instead of by disaffected Poles, bent upon recovering by any and every means their national independence.

AVOID DECEPTION

Use Newbro's Herpicide Instead

Wearing artificial hair is a harmless deceit of which many ladies are guilty. These women are all objects for sympathy rather than criticism.

Early neglect in the care of the scalp has caused the loss of so much hair that their personal appearance is sadly marred. To correct this defect they resort to artificial hair.

Most ladies would resent any imputation of personal carelessness or neglect. Any yet very many women are suffering from hair to become so thin that the scalp is visible. There is a remedy for this condition that it is so simple and so effective.

All this is an unnecessary expense. Hair that is thinning may usually be attributed to the violent activity of the dandruff germ. The vicious germ burrows down to the hair-follicle, shortly destroying its life. The hair becomes dead, loose and finally drops out.

There is a remedy sold by all druggists, the intelligent use of which will kill the dandruff germ. It also cleanses the scalp of all accumulations and makes the hair shine with the luster of life and beauty.

This remedy is Newbro's Herpicide, the Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer. This preparation in one dollar size bottles is sold and guaranteed everywhere.

Applications may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich., will send a nice sample and booklet to any address upon receipt of 10c. in postage or silver. E. Clinton Brown, Special Agent, corner Union and Waterloo streets.

Three Great British contracting firms have tendered for the construction of dry dock, breakwater and wharves at Courtenay Bay. This means an immense development at St. John East, thanks to the efforts of Hon. Dr. Fugaley.
