

THE MILLINERS' ART.

Show Room Openings Held Thursday and Friday.

SOME OF FASHION'S NEW CREATIONS

The Styles This Year More Simple But Decidedly Attractive--What The Chronicle Reporter Saw.

The millinery show rooms of the town were opened on Thursday, and although the weather was anything but propitious, they were largely attended.

The Chronicle reporter, on a visit among the interested visitors and the following briefly describes what he saw.

HENDRY & CO.

On visiting the establishment of Oscar Hendry & Co., our reporter was ushered into a scene of the greatest activity, this being the first day of their millinery show room opening.

Two or three features are particularly noticeable among the fall and winter wear. Rough materials of all kinds are in popular demand.

Among the many charming hats and bonnets that deserve special attention we notice the Dolores, one of the season's novelties, and is characterized by a sort of double crown of white chenille.

Another striking feature in this display is a table of stylish New York ready-to-wear and tailor-made street hats.

On leaving the show room it was with the conviction that Miss Hamilton and Mr. Hendry have good reason to be proud of their display.

Our attention is next directed to the firm's fall and winter display and new dress fabrics for the coming season.

have seen it. Decorations are general throughout the store, green and white predominating and being shown in the prettiest of designs, such as double hearts, and fancy scrolls that stretch across the store.

Every department of the store is literally packed full of bright new goods for the fall trade.

The milliner above room was, of course, the centre of attraction with the ladies yesterday, and by the many complimentary remarks made, as well as by the extraordinary number of orders placed, it was an undoubted success.

A very large collection of hats were exhibited. With few exceptions they are more modest than recent years, simplicity being a "popular" feature in their make up at the same time they carry with them plenty of style.

The immense stock of mantles and jackets shown by this firm, is a surprise to a great many, being more than double the assortment of any previous season, and comprising all the latest cuts, lengths, etc.

The fur department is well worthy of a visit. An exceedingly wide range in the newest creations are shown, and Mr. Boles says that this alone was worth $3,000, which suggests as to the volume of business they do in this line.

was not without its charms. The south window was given up entirely to the newest suiting goods and an exquisite showing of trimmings which conveyed to the prospective purchaser a most comprehensive idea of the made-up appearance they would present.

As the reporter halted at the broad entrance, his thoughts at once ran rampant at the richness of the scene, which an unobstructed view revealed.

HE VISITED THE SALESLADIES.

A gentleman long thought to have passed the period of susceptible infatuation contributes the following after a visit to John E. Boles' dry goods store: You will miss a sight not very common in Ingersoll in not looking in at the display at "Boles'".

The ride on the elevator is short and sweet. You just get a start when you find yourself there. The sitting posture for the ladies in the show window is very humane on the part of Mr. Boles, the standing up all day makes one tired even when gazing on the life like beauties.
