RECIPROCITY.

THE WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE IN SESSION.

Arguments for Unrestricted Reciprocity with Canada.—Hon. Mr. Batesworth explains the bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—E. J. Ritchie, of Ohio, appeared before the Ways and Means committee today and argued in favor of the free importation of Canadian mineral ores and in favor of unrestricted reciprocity with Canada.

Hon. Benjamin Batesworth of Ohio addressed the committee in support of his bill for reciprocity with Canada.

The object of the measure, he said, was to bring about unrestricted trade between Canada and the United States and incidentally to settle all disputes growing out of the Atlantic fisheries question.

To Canada the United States had vast stores of supplies, and a splendid market. Canada purchases vast quantities of goods from the United States than any other country in the Western hemisphere, and he said it was inevitable why the United States should not offer her legal and liberal trade measures to Canada as it was seeking to thrust upon all of the South and Central America and Mexico by a most hospitable diplomacy.

Geography and destiny had placed the two people so close together, and nothing but passionate statesmanship could permit them to continue as two countries.

He was republican with ultra tendencies but he laid it down as an incontrovertible proposition that, in the presence of even conditions, a protective tariff had to be proper to perform and never had, and the fathers of the republic, and those who advocated protection, never believed it had, and never so said.

He believed a protective system was to restrict trade, not to create competition, but to correct the unfairness of that which is unequal and unjust. The trouble with the question of reciprocity was that politics entered into it and not statesmanship.

He did not appeal to politics, but to that statesmanship which would give to our people the opportunity to have the benefit of the broad domain north of St. Lawrence.

PORTUGAL AND ENGLAND.

A Bond Started at Lisbon for National Defense.

Lisbon, Jan. 24.—A large meeting was held in Trinity Theatre last night to start a bond for national defense.

The Duke of Fomares presided. A committee of 20 consisting of French and citizens and naval and military officers was appointed to solicit subscriptions to the fund.

A number of speeches were made in which England was bitterly assailed for the course she followed in the dispute with Portugal and the French and Spanish were lauded for their sympathy with the Portuguese.

A Train Wrecker Confesses.

BLACK RIVER FALLS, Wis., Jan. 24.—Alfred Newlin who was charged with the murder of a passenger on the Milwaukee and St. Paul road, confessed to the crime on Monday morning.

Newlin was arrested a month ago and Guinup was captured in St. Lawrence county, N. Y., a week ago.

In his confession, Newlin said he and Guinup planned to wreck the Milwaukee and St. Paul road, and he was the one who did the deed.

Not Hostile to England.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The Times Lisbon correspondent protests against the interpretation of hostility to England on the part of the American newspaper placed upon the fact of his presence at a meeting of the Anglo-American society at which an anti-English demonstration was made.

Sch. Elite in Trouble.

MONTREAL, Jan. 24.—Sch. Elite Capt Lewis and from St. John for New York with lumber sprang a leak off Point Lepreau and filled.

The vessel succeeded in making Cutler where she will repair and proceed. A tug from St. John is at Cutler to render assistance.

Portuguese Minister to England.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The Lisbon announcement that the Marquis de Fomares will be appointed Portuguese minister to Great Britain is incorrect. Sir Barjona de Torres will be appointed to the post.

ONE OF HER BOATS FOUND.

A RELIC OF THE ERIN FOUND OFF THE ASORES.

Nothing Head of the Steamer.—The vessel was found off the Azores.

New York, Jan. 24.—A despatch to the Maritime Exchange today said that the steamer Creole had picked up the Erin's life-boat in lat. 45 deg. 36 deg. 00 min. about 150 miles northwest of the Azores. That part of the Atlantic has been comparatively calm, while the winds have been blowing in higher latitudes. It is probable that the men who left the Erin in the abandoned life-boat may have been blown down the coast of the small islands farther north. The Erin was amply provided with boats, and unless they were swamped or broken in the launching, there is hope that nearly all of her crew may have escaped.

Mr. F. W. T. Hurst, the agent of the National line, said today, "I am inclined to think that something has happened to the ship, but I do not believe that she has put in at the Azores. If she has, we may not hear from her for some time. If we lose her, she will be the first ship of the line ever lost at sea. We carry her on our own risks, and the Erin has gone down she is a total loss to us. The ship is worth, perhaps, $200,000, and the cargo about 75 per cent. of the value. She was commanded by Capt. Tyson, a very careful man with a fine record. She had on board a crew of 67 men, I believe, and 10 cutters."

One of the leading underwriters said today: "We have received a cable despatch from London stating that 75 per cent. of the cargo of the Erin's cargo is at Lloyd's today. The rate yesterday was 30 per cent. In other words people who have merchandise on board the Erin are paying 75 per cent. of its value to insure it. This shows that business men on the other side think of the Erin as a vessel of great value. It is not lost, but that she has sustained serious damage of some kind. In the event of trouble of any kind the Erin's cargo would prove a very awkward and uncomfortable cargo to handle."

Capt. Salter, the marine underwriter's inspector, examined the Erin while she was loading and before she sailed by direction of the Boston Marine Insurance office, which he said today: "The Erin was not deep in the water. The distance from the upper deck line to the water line was 11 ft. This is a good sign. The overdue steamer Servia arrived today. She never made a slower voyage or a more tempestuous one. From the time she left Queenstown at 1 o'clock on the afternoon of Jan. 12, she had a daily fight with sea and fog. She was on Monday last only 142 miles from New York. She was accompanied with heavy seas, but she steamed up to her pier. The wind at quarantine was so strong that the Servia's boat was unable to take off the Servia's mail. The Servia passed, when about 600 miles out of Queenstown, a lot of buoys. They may have come from some cattle. Local news, westerly winds, slight rise in temperature."
