

The College Street Auxiliary to the Womans' Foreign Missionary Society yields its quota this year. This Society has been a means of inspiring missionary zeal by its meetings and its literature.

We heartily congratulate the active agencies of these departments on their gratifying success. "Let us not be weary in well doing," but may we all so highly appreciate the great privileges we enjoy as to be filled with gratitude and love that our zeal may abound.

Our Own Mission at Seaton Village. The Sabbath School here opened on the first Sabbath morning of 1887, with preaching service on the same afternoon and a weekly prayer meeting on Thursday evening.

These meetings have been carried on without intermission. The Session appointed the Pastor, Mr. Mitchell, and the Elder of the district, a Committee charged with the special oversight.

During the summer months, Mr. Logie was appointed to the charge of the congregation and labored with much acceptance as missionary, and when the winter season began Mr. Buchanan succeeded him; the faithful service rendered by these gentlemen has been well appreciated. The attendance at the congregational service has been fluctuating, the average being 25. The Mission Hall is in an obscure place, inconvenient, unattractive, and unsuitable, but being the only available building, has been used of necessity. Any considerable growth cannot reasonably be expected in such circumstances. The Mission has been loyally and zealously supported, however, by our few friends resident in the locality.

The Mission Sabbath School has grown and flourished. The teachers and officers engaged in it have been encouraged by the large attendance and the admirable conduct of the scholars. The mutual attachment of teachers and scholars is a source of much satisfaction. Above all, we gratefully recognize the good hand of the Master in the evidences of growth in Christian grace both in the school and congregation. We earnestly commend the Mission to the whole congregation, hoping it may be the means of developing a large-hearted and unselfish missionary spirit, and afford ample scope for aggressive work.

As we expect each department to submit a report of its operations we deem it unnecessary to enter into further details, which would probably anticipate the interesting matters they will present. We cannot close our brief report, however, without expressing our gratitude for the peace and concord which have prevailed throughout the year, and for all the prosperity our good Lord has been pleased to send upon us.

To His name be all the praise.

ALEX. GILRAY,

Moderator.

G. E. DALBY,
