

MR. DEARE'S LOVE STORY.

BY E. W. THOMSON, AUTHOR OF "FETTERED FEET," "THE ACCIDENT," "THEY HAD A PLAN," ETC.

up with this love. "Oh, Lily, Lily!" He actually blurted all over at her name, groaned worse than ever, covered his head with the blanket, got up after a while to look at the moon. "Like a first-class damned fool!" he said to himself, and went back to objurgating the pillow, to wonder how he could round all morning with never a wink. Next day Mr. Deare received the most charming surprise of his life when Mr. Seisin, the eminent real estate lawyer, offered him one hundred thousand dollars more for his property near the railway than everybody had ever supposed it to be worth. Mr. Seisin refused to disclose his principal's name, or the purpose for which the land was required, undertook to manage it for him, and enjoy a comfortable income from houses remaining to him unencumbered. Deare promptly notified Smithers of his intention to pay, and when Smithers called at the old man's home on Thursday he found his debtor in a delightfully easy frame of mind. "Well, if you are still determined to have an answer from my daughter," he said, "I will not object, Smithers, but really I think your wisest course will be to drop it."
