CHATHAM. H. B. - NOVEMBER 22, 100 We are to judge by what is said in the Onterio papers, Hon. Mr. Foster's tinued. The American demand for Candian pine and spruce has been a great strong point with the Quebec and Lower port firms, and we understand some big or chosen as leader of the Conservative party, are not promising. It is realised more and more every day that the party owes its defeat, in a greater measure to oversite in the Conservative of th very much about our public men, whose last year:-NRUG STORE doings are ever before them. Moreover when Mr. Foster, or anyone else, makes a business of misrepresenting those who are as well known in public life as he himself is, and whose records compare at least favorably with his own, he errs to his own hurt and undoing. It may, therefore, be said that Mr. Foster's guise of the pharisee, through which the public could not but see the whited sepulchre, has had much to do with his want to turn it into money, you must fight."

They remark that he entered parliament under Liberal auspices and as the chamjoined the Conservatives for the sake of office and declared that his prohibition professions were made "in a moment of weakness." It is also placed against him that he was the chief plotter against Premier Bowell in 1896, when he and six other members of the government went on strike, but were obliged to return to the old gentleman, beg his pardon and again take office under him—an episode which disgusted many conservatives all over the country and contributed very largely to the party's ballot, the directions under which it was placed with the Merchords and the difficulties of complying well as other devices for compelling independent New Brunswick Conservatives to subscribe to the treacherous and suicidal policy which Mr. Foster had devised. It may be that Mr. McInerney fully realised the wrong he had done to his own future and the old friends who had hoped for better things for him, when Mr. Foster's one which the C. P.
