THE MODERN IMMIGRANT.

Mrs. Simpson Hayes, described as an agent of the Canadian Government, is in England making an appeal for a better class of female emigrants for Canada. She urges that well bred, well spoken, well mannered and enthusiastic women should come here. In an interview given one of the London papers recently, Mrs. Hayes said:-

"Canada is tired of the English girl emigrating. The reason is this. These emigrating. The reason is this. These girls when leaving England bolster themselves up with the idea that they are leaving servitude behind and that

We have all heard sermons from the above text and tiresome enough the mest of them were, but this one will not be tedious if it is tiresome for there are no divisions and sub-divisions and seventeenthlys to it.

This sermon was suggested by reading about the first quarrel of a newly married couple. It was caused by a toothbrush. He wanted to keep his toothbrush in the bath room and she wanted it kept in the bed room. Now wanted it kept in the bed room and she wanted it kept in the bed room. Now a mean man would say that the bath room was the proper place for it and as he owned a part of the bath room and all of the toothbrush, he should have been allowed to keep it where he have been allowed to keep it where he pleased. But we do not discuss in this paper the proper place for keeping toothbrushes, but the extreme foolishness of letting an insignificant little toothbrush, not worth more than twenty-five cents, divide "two hearts that beat as one." If that foolish little woman had said to her hubby, "You can keep the toothbrush in the barn or on the piano if you want to," and he had said, "I will keep it in the china closet or the coal scuttle just where you prefer," there would have been no foundations laid for subsequent quarrels. And yet how many quarrels have arisen out of trifles as insignificant as a toothbrush. Many husbands and wives have commenced a life of unhappiness ending in the divorce court with less than a toothbrush for a commencement. Because she wore a hat not trimmed to his taste and he did not hang up his hat or coat when she not trimmed to his taste and he did not hang up his hat or coat when she wanted them, or forgot to hang them up at all, and he was a fussy little man who wanted to see too much and hear too much and did not know enough to be deaf and dumb and blind at times, and because she was just as foolish, home has been made not to be a reminder of heaven but—

I have known churches to be divided because of "toothbrush" methods. A part of the church wanted the pews cushioned and a part did not, Some cushioned and a part did not. Some wanted the church painted one color and others wanted a different shade.
