CANADIAN NEWS.

WHITBY, Sept. 11.—V. J. Davey, governor of the jail here for seven years, has tendered his resignation to take effect October first. This action is the outcome of recent troubles at the jail, followed by efforts of Conservatives here and throughout the county to bring about long desired changes at the jail and court house.

WINDSOR, Ont. Sept. 11.—The lives of twenty workmen were endangered by a cave-in at the Michigan Central tunnel this morning. Recent rains created an enormous pressure on the shaft at the river bank, and timbers gave way while a score of employees were down sixty feet from the surface. Fortunately the cave-in was gradual and caused such a depression on Sandwick street that traffic is blocked. The cave-in will tie up work on the tunnel for 20 days, or possibly more.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—The Franco-Canadian commercial treaty will be signed this week by Sir P. Berte, British Ambassador, H. Pelling and Rouvier on behalf of King Edward, and Michon and three other ministers from France.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 11.—Having in his possession a C. P. R. ticket which was of no use to him, Lindsay P. Lawrence disposed of it. Magistrate McMillan fined him $7.50.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The Globe referring to the Newfoundland question states that the present government intend to make it their policy to support foreign countries against imperial colonies, they had better say so openly.

against what it calls the evil and danger of the intolerance with which large sections of the British population overseas regard Asiatic immigration that is to say, against the demand of an all white policy which is arising so ominously in Australia, New Zealand, Natal, the Transvaal, and now in Western Canada. It compares it with the Chinese policy for the exclusion of the "foreign devils" against which Great Britain has always fought so strenuously. Finally the Times reminds the British Colonians that it is the British fleet and British taxpayers alone who will have to bear the brunt of any quarrel which the folly or stupidity of any colonial democracy might provoke. Moreover it is upon this country not British Columbia that falls the onerous task of keeping peace with India, in circumstances which the attitude towards the King's Indian subjects in British Columbia are calculated to inflame.

The Times apparently has small English support in this highly-toilette tone. It is realized that this Japanese problem is not unlikely to see Canada thoughts on quite new lines respecting empire defence but it is also realized that the race invasion is imperilling the daily livelihood of white men and cannot be disposed of thus glibly.

It is widely felt also to be a serious matter for British interest in America if the Canadian popular demand for a white population were given a most sympathetic exposition and support in the United States. The problem as most thinking Englishmen see it is to reconcile the imperial foreign policy and the Japanese alliance with what is realized as certain to become Canada's general determination not to tolerate lower Canadian standards of living or new tendencies to deteriorate to the Oriental level.

ENGLISH PRONUNCIATION.

To the Star: Referring to the instance mentioned in The Star a few days ago as to the pronunciation of English names differing from the way in which they are spelled, recalls another instance. A traveller in England asked to be directed to Oswestry but the person asked looked puzzled and professed not the ignorance of such a place until it finally occurred to him to say: "Perhaps you mean 'Whistletree'." Oh, there you are, keep on and turn to the right. Again you venture to pronounce the words Worcester and Gloucester as they are spelled? It has become custom but it does not seem common sense.

And once more. Some of these Englishmen who affect such superiority of education to the despised "Colonials" as they term them do not know how or affect not to know how to pronounce the King's English calling for instance the word trade, "wade" with a sort of deprecatory sneer at those engaged in trade not being able to discern that the trade and commerce of Great Britain are the backbone of its greatness and prosperity and that some of those affected would be swells in the ranks who are after all only the police of the nation, are dependent on this very trade for their coveted "pay" and look eagerly forward to an increase of a shilling a day. Out upon such affectation and nonsense!

Yours truly, "ORTHOGRAHY."

MR. STEAD GIVES HIS VIEWS ON TEMPERANCE LEGISLATION

You ask me to point out the benefits of temperance legislation, and the inherent evils of the public house, writes W. T. Stead. Alas! I am much more tempted to point out the inherent evils of temperance legislation and the benefits of the public house. More than twenty years ago I horrified Mr. Spurgeon and many other excellent people by declaring publicly that the ideal church should include athletes among its church members, run a theatre and a public house. I am still of the same opinion. I have no quarrel with people who wish to see mankind so virtuous and happy, so comfortable and with such internal resources, as to feel no need for either the theatre or the public house. But I am a practical man who tries to make the best of the worst of things, and who has learned in the school of life that every bad thing that exists is standing in the place of something worse, and that if only way to make progress is not to smash the bad thing until you have got something better to put in its place. Otherwise the result of your smashing operation will be to make things worse instead of better. We have to deal with men and women as they are, to recognize their wants and their necessities; and if we have to do them any good we ought to try and put ourselves in their place and see how we would like it if any of our pet nostrums were being employed for our reformation.

THE BARMAID PROBLEM.

Take, for instance, one favorite "reform" much advocated by many of my friends, the abolition of the barmaid. I can never bring myself to imagine without a shudder the public houses of England without barmaids. Woman is the humanizer of mankind. To brutalize men there is no speedier or more effective plan than to banish them from the society of women. Granting the worst that can be said against public houses, they would be still worse if women were banished from the bar.

Those of my readers who have spent any time in American saloons will bear me out when I say that the presence of women behind the bars makes the public house less of a mere boozing den and more of a home. Of course, I understand the aim and object of those people who, having declared war to the death against the public house, set on foot the cry against the barmaid in order that the public house, being made worse by her banishment, may be brought appreciably nearer their final doom. But if the public house is to remain an essential part of the social organism, as it is now, and as it ever will be till the advent of the millennium, then it seems to me that the crusade against the barmaid is an attempt to deprive an institution which stands in sore need not of deprecation but of improvement and amelioration. One of the fundamental and most earnest wants of mankind is society, and especially the society of women. It is because they minister to this need that church choirs and Sunday schools strike their roots so deeply into our social life. I should prefer that my boys met girls in the Sunday school and in the singing class rather than that they should meet them behind a bar. But I would rather than that they never met them at all. "Remember," a wise man of the world once wrote to me, "that there are 100,000 young men in London who can call no woman by her Christian name excepting a barmaid." A man who cannot call any woman in all the world by her Christian name is a dorell in a desolate sea, the waves of which are salt indeed.

If I wanted to draw a picture of the best and worst method of ministering to the social needs of men I should contrast the drunken orgy of a Welsh or Scotch shabene on Sunday night with the happy family life that is to be seen in a German beer-garden. In the former the only attraction is the intoxicant. It holds the field. All dividing and humbling accessories are banished. Men meet to drink themselves drunk. In the German beer garden the presence of the intoxicant is often so subordinated to the innocent pleasures of social intercourse that it is hardly noticed. The father and the mother, the sons and daughters, the family friends meet under the shade of the trees to listen to the strains of a band and to enjoy their fragrant meal together. If we could but assimilate the German beer-garden under our inclement skies we should do more for the temperance cause than by passing half a dozen Permissive Bills.

I have far too keen appreciation of the mischief done by the multiplication of centres
