

Visit of President Truman

Last week, Canada was honoured with a visit from the President of the United States of America. It was the visit of a good and friendly neighbour. In his address to the Members of Parliament, the President spoke particularly of the interests which our two countries have in common. Above all, Mr. Truman stressed the need, at this time, for nations everywhere to unite in seeking to build and maintain an enduring peace. He reminded us that peace, like freedom, was one and indivisible; that the well-being of each nation is bound up in the security of all. These sentiments were warmly applauded by those who listened to them. They found an echo in the hearts of the people in all parts of Canada.

The Marian Congress

The visit of the President to our capital city a week ago was the visit of the leading representative of a great State from a single country. Today, we welcome leading representatives of an ancient Church from many countries. Our distinguished visitors have come to Canada to participate in a vast religious gathering which has, as a main purpose, prayer for peace throughout the world.
