

J. H. STANTON,—The photographic studio of J. H. Stanton, situated on the east side of Colborne St., is one of the best in Ontario. Mr. Stanton is an artist who shows his talent in every line of work. In individual photographs he is most successful in posing, always producing a graceful and natural effect, and the retouching and finishing of his pictures is first-class. His groups and views are also very fine, a number of the latter finding a place in the Saturday editions of the Toronto Globe, and other well-known papers. Mr. Stanton has made a reputation for himself for artistic work and his business extends through several counties. His Kawartha Lakes views are beautiful and reasonable in price.

W. L. ROBSON came to Fenelon Falls 40 years ago and has been engaged in the grocery business here for some years. He is Town Treasurer, and has served on both Council and School Board.

PAUL OUELLETT has been engaged in the meat business in the Village for years and keeps a large stock of fresh and smoked meats. He is kept constantly busy and his large trade extends for many miles around. Tourists and campers can find everything required in the meat line at Mr. Ouellett's. He does a very large trade with the lumbermen of this district, making large weekly shipments to the north country.

THE FENELON FALLS STAR will shortly complete its fourth year. Mr. R. J. Moore the present editor and publisher, came to Fenelon Falls from North Bay and took over the control of the paper in August 1901, since which time its circulation and influence has grown to such an extent that wide-awake advertisers are beginning to realize that they cannot over-look it, and it is now not a question of how best to solicit their patronage, but how to meet the demands upon his space that the editor finds difficult. However, he hopes to shortly install a large cylinder press and The Star will then be issued in greatly enlarged form. In Job Printing of all descriptions few offices have the equipment that The Star has, or excel in the class of work turned out. They make a specialty of wedding announcements, and color work, and some of the samples shown of three and four-color work would be hard to surpass by the lithographer. The staff is constantly busy. Their motto is good work, reasonable prices and ready for customer when promised.

R. J. Moore.
