Dr. Thos Spence occupied the chair and in introducing the speaker spoke of the subject as one which both ministers and medical men were neglecting to bring before the public. He urged their attention to the address. Mr. Wright, coming forward, first addressed the boys who occupied the front seats. Every boy listened with rapt attention to the speaker as he pictured by i'lustration from nature the terrible consequences of early indiscretion. The remainder of the address was intended mainly for the adults. It was most practical throughout, bearing upon all the great sensual evils by this school failed which are underminding society. Whose Enemies Are They!

Editor Gazette :- Your neighbor, the Vidette has this remark in its issue of names of eight constituencies which in the bye-elections had voted conservative, "Eight Ontario seats wrested from the enemy." A thinking man will naturally ask: the enemy of what? Is it the enemy of the country that is meant? If so, how would it answer for the Reformers of Ontario to make the same remark in a similar case with the Ontario Government which is Reform. Are the Opposition the enemy of the country in every ease? Or does the remark refer to the Conservative party simply? trustees have long since passed away, If so I presume the Reformers will be quite satisfied with it if it does look nasty. The writer of this has never drawn the line very tight on party politics, and has yet to learn that the "Alpha and Omega" of the country good rests with either political party, supposing that a good honest opposition is necessary in any Government, to make when does the enemy come in.

A Circumstance.

Upon a winter evening About two months ago About two months ago, There was a social tea At Orange Hill you know.

The night was fine, the sleighing good,
The young folks turned out well,
But of one youthful happy pair
My story goes to tell.

The young man brought his best girl out,
As all young men should do:
Tucked warn with robes in portland fine,
The horse wore sleigh bells too.
But some one thought 't' would be a joke
To hide the bells' way,
And watch around whas he would do,
And hear what he would say.

The meeting closed, the young man went out, To bring his horse 'twas time, And told his gir! to listen for His horse bells merry chime.

He got his rig, but noticed not That all his bells were gone, So patiently did hold his nag, Till she would come along.

the waited too and thought it strange.
That he did thus delay,
full some kind friends set matters right.
And saw them on their way.
