"The Borden Government has go its closure rule before the House last-not without trouble. "Mr. Borden introduced the sure resolution in a speech wh was conciliatory in spirit and d nified in tone. He regretted the necessity of amending the rules debate in order to cope with sys tematic obstruction, but the necessity existed, and must be deal with. He claimed that the proposed closure rules were not drastic as those which have los been in force in the British Hous of Commons. Sir Wilfrid Laurie

denied this and asserted that th
