"But the Yankees will have some in pronouncing that name

"That's all right," answered the explorers. "The Yankees are going to have all kinds of trouble with this river some day, anyway."

Thus it will be seen that there was no lack of Poultney Bigelows hundreds of years ago.

Hot Water Fountain Hot Water Fountain.

One of the spectacular features of the health resort of Thermopylis, Wis., is a hot-water fountain, the steam effects of which are said to be entrancing in favorable atmospheric conditions. It consists of a 6-inch standpipe 28 feet high on the pipe line running from the Big Spring to the sanitarium and bathhouses. The water falls into a concrete basin, from which it flows to the river. The temperature of the water is about 135 degrees F., and the steam effect is said to be very attractive on rool days.

Milwawkee Woman Kissed Fifteen Men at Her Frent Gate.

Wilwaukee, June 17 .- "Just think of no kiss in three months, and ju because I kissed 15 men on a stretch he arrested me for being disorderly. He has no temperament whatever," said Agnes Sobaszak, charged with kisaing 15 men, one after another, at the front gate of her home. Patrolman Loetzinger made the arrest.

"Was she a good kisser" asked Judge Neelen.

"Well, she was certainly going some when I saw her. One would have thought she had not kissed in ten years," replied the patrolman. "She kissed more sorts of kisses in 30 minutes than I ever knew existed. She cannot be beat at osculation." ecause I kissed 15 men on a stretch he

"It is true, Judge," tearfully sobbed
Mrs. Sobszak, "but I had been at the

THE WOMEN. Many Delegates Visited the Public and the Hague. (Special Despatch to the Times.) Toronto, Ont., June 17 .- This morning was spent by a large number of the delegates to the Woman's Council in a visit to the city Public Schools under the gates to the Woman's Council in a visit to the city Public Schools under the guidance of Inspector James L. Hughes, About forty ladies were in the party, composed of those interested in educational work. They visited first the Rosedale Public School, where a class of children did a Spanish dance for them. This did not meet with the approval of Froken Elizabeth Gad, from Denmark, who claimed that this wos not proper training for little girls, being a sort of training school for the theatre. At the Alexandra school a fire drill was gone through and the school of 900 children emptied in a minute and a half. On account of the rain the infants' home was not visited. The rest of the delegates remained at home, with the exception of those engaged in a private confernce of the Executive session. The Peace and Arbitration Committee has been meeting for the past two days. Representatives of the different nations have been given petitions which are to be presented to The Hague Conference. Some of the ladies did not entirely like these petitions, looking at them as perhaps disloyal. They were finally satisfied, however. Miss Anna B. Eckstein, of Boston, is President of this committee. She tiddressed the second Hague Conference at its last sitting. Mrs. Edwin Gray. tiddressed the second Hague Conference at its last sitting. Mrs. Edwin Gray, President of the English delegates, an-President of the Engine deegutes, an-neumed this morning that she wanted to go home. "Why?" somebody asked. "To talk Canada. This has been the most misrepresented country on earth," she replied. The delegation will probably be the biggest assistance to immigration which has yet taken place in Canada.

Facts About the Lightning Flash. If you're afraid of lightning, and dive into the storm cellar when it thunders, it's time to grease the cellar stairs. For into the storm cellar when it thunders, it's time to grease the cellar stairs. For May and June are the busiest seasons of the year for these two.

In the cities, the steel buildings and metal roofs draw off most of the lightning and give a protection to the inhabitants of a city. Isolated buildings in the country are still struck frequently, however, and the authorities recommend lightning rods for these—or insurance.

The oak tree is most liable to be struck by lightning. The beech is the least, the proportion being 23 to 1. Rocky Mountain regions and upper Missouri valley see the most deaths by lightning in the United States.

Damage by lightning in this country last year amounted to more than $1,500,000.

The Pacific coast west of the moun tains is freest from lightning of a part of the country, the average bei about one storm a year. This is d to the more uniform electrification

Believing in the immunity of buildings located in populated centres, the United States Government has no lightning rods on any federal buildings except powder magazines, and the Wash-

The protection given the Washington monument is called the most perfect in the world. A light strike twenty years ago aroused the Government engineers, who installed additional equipment. It is a shining mark for electric flashes, but has withstood them all since the change.

Lightning rod equipment, placed by competent people, will draw the lightning efficiently except in the case of an unusually severe and powerful charge. In case of a person struck by lightnin, resuscitation processes should be resorted to at once, and the work not given up for at least an hour.

The process of reviving a person struck by lightning is similar to that of a drowning person. Place victim on back flat on ground and work arms over head every three seconds regularly to restore breathing.

Men's Straw Hats.

The new shapes in men's straw hats vary little. The crowns are fairly high, vary little. The crowns are fairly high, but the bands are wider than last year on many of the hats. The English hats are wonderfully light in weight, some of them, although they look particularly solid. Alpine hats are now made of green straw, and some of the shops are featuring Ecuador panamas, which are entirely distinctive and are very unlike the more familiar variety of this hat, as they are almost ecru in color. The younger men are, of course, affecting soft gray, or even green, felt hats and are wearing them this season with gaily colored bands or even hat scarfs.—Fairchild's Magazine.

Sorrows of the World

There is much that makes me sorry as I journey down life's way, And I seem to see more pathos in poor human lives each day; I'm sorry for the strong, brave men who

Im sorry for the anguished hearts that break with passion's strain,
But I'm sorrier for the poor, starved souls that never knew love's pain.
Who hunger on Frough barren years, not tasting joys they crave,
For sadder far is such a lot than weeping o'er a grave.

I'm sorry for the souls that come un-welcomed into birth, sorry for the unloved old who cum-

In truth I'm sorry for them all who make this aching world.

But underneath whate'er seems sad, and is not understood,
I know their lies, hid from our sight, a

And this belief stands firm by me, my

The sorriest things in this life will seem grandest in the next.

Insects Possess Reasoning Powers? A different degree of wit and reason or the dog, the horse, and other ani-A different degree of wit and reason for the dog, the horse, and other animals than the wit and reason of man, but not a different kind, is the verdict of Prof. Nathan A. Harvey, Normal college of Ypsilanti, Michigan. But insects' minds are of a different quality. When we observe a mud wasp building its cell, stocking it with spiders that are not dead but paralyzed by stinging in the ventral ganglia; when we see such complicated activities of this kind blesponful of butter, add a teaspoon-ful of salt, a dash of cayenne, and the minced lamb. Let it come to a boil and must be convinced that the insect necessarily possesses a high degree of intelli-sarily possesses a high degree of intelli-gence.

Some observers of course attribute these activities to instinct. Prof. Harvey admits this, but he reckons with instinct in considering intelligence. Man ex-hibits many instincts, but none of them can be compared in complexity of fixcan be compared in complexity of fixedness to those of insects. But we know that the more nearly perfect any activity becomes in us the more nearly it approaches the instinctive action. The actions that begin as voluntary by practice come to assume the form closely allied to that of instincts. We instinctively raise our hand to ward off a blow. Our mental processes with self-evident truths, Prof. Harvey thinks, most nearly approximate an instinct.

Were we asked how we know that the whole is equal to the sum of all its parts we immediately answer that it could not be otherwise. So it is easy to fancy that if a mud wasp were asked how she knows just where to sting the spider and why she does that before putting it into the cell, she would say it could not be done in any other way.

Prof. Harvey's point is that our knowledge of the fact that the whole is equal to the sum of all its parts, which we know as soon as it is necessary for us to. Know it, is not an indication of a lack of intelligence, A person who did not know it instinctively would have the mind lacking in intelligence. So the acedness to those of insects. But we know intelligence. A person who did know it instinctively would have mind lacking in intelligence. So the ac-tivities that are called instinctive in insects are indications of a high degree of intelligence. Close Plant Out of Respect for Negro.

Close Plant Out of Respect for Negro.

The unusual spectacle of a large manufacturing plant closing down a most important department during a busy season because of the death of a faithful negro employee was witnessed here today, when the veneer manufacturing department of the large factory of B. C. Jarrell & Co. shut down at dinner at the request of about a hundred negro employees that this be done so they could attend the funeral services of Uncle John Davis, an old time negro and exslave, who died at his home here last night. The old negro had worked at this plant for nearly twenty years and was thoroughly respected by all who knew him.— Humboldt correspondence Nashville Tennessecan. Nashville Tennesseean.
