AN APPEAL.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—The most serious question which can occupy the minds of the citizens of any town is that of the death rate; it is precisely this question which seems never to give the least concern to the people of St. John's. Year in and year out scores—perhaps hundreds—of the inhabitants of this town meet untimely deaths from diseases which are readily preventable, and this lamentable circumstance troubles the minds and the consciences of no one. I say preventable disease! Of all the towns I know this town of St. John's should be the freest from putrid and dirt-borne disease; of all the towns I know it is the most plague-stricken. Our death-rate would not greatly discredit a settlement on the pestiferous coast of Guinea. And it all comes from the one cause, DIRT. Nature has done her best for us; air, ocean and land have entered into a conspiracy to afford us a situation unequalled in the New World for the wholesome

Uplifting of a Hardy Race.

And yet we have seen times when our children died like sheep with the scurvy, and we never see the season when many many lives are not lost through diseases which are solely born of the insanitary conditions under which we live. And hitherto we have done nothing to avert the wrath of public spirit has at length begun to awaken from its apathy, we content ourselves by contemplating in the future a course of action which must in its very nature be futile. I do not time for us to recognise and avow the truth which has been pressing itself upon our attention during a long course of years past, that all our evils arise from the

Prevalence of Dirt

everywhere in the town. That all sorts of infectious diseases are continually rising amongst us and continually leaving their toll of death from our fellow citizens, is denied by nobody. The diseases which solely contribute to produce these diseases appear to us of small account, and small wherever we walk, and nevertheless in our pride and obstinacy we refuse to admit the undeniable truth and profess to see the source of our danger in the very place whence we derive what immunity from pestilence we possess. Disease, I say, is life amongst us, some of it may be traced to the tanks whose demerits I have recently celebrated, none of it has ever been traced to the waters of Windsor Lake, and none of it is ever likely to be traced there if we adopt the most simple precautions against waste and pollution from the accumulation of sediment in the Pond. Where then must we seek the sources of the disease which we know to exist? Nowhere else than in the drains, sewers, puddles, cesspools, gullies, garbage heaps

And General Filth of the Town

and the immediate suburbs. Where should we look for the germs of typhoid, for instance? We have it or unexceptionable authority that not in Windsor Lake, not even in the Prince's Street tank, do the germs of typhoid reside, yet they are even now amongst us and in active operation. Plainly, then, we must seek for the cause of this loathsome and often deadly disease in the pestiferous, stinking filth which disfigures nearly every street in St. John's. And if typhoid can have no other breeding place than this filth, it is not natural to suppose that the other diseases allied to typhoid breed in similar hot-beds? Even Prince's Street tank, bad as it is, cannot be justly charged with the widely dispersed outbreaks of bowel complaints which carry off so many of our people. Let us, therefore, abandon all fear of the bugbear which alarmists have conjured from out the waters of Twenty Mile Pond, and reserve our just fear for the accumulations of dirt

Which Breed Pestilence

at every corner and spread it in every street of the town. If the lives of our fellow citizens are to be saved from wanton destruction, let us take the only reasonable step which is before us, and CLEAN THE TOWN. No other remedy but this is open to us; if we refuse to adopt this remedy we sin against light and against knowledge. And that is the deadly sin. I said just now that Nature had done its best for us by offering to us a home on a site which made health the inherited right of all its inhabitants. Nature has done even more than this for us, for She has time and again come to our rescue and preserved us from the condemnation which our wanton neglect of Her laws provoked. When the accumulations of our filth have corrupted and bred the seeds of pestilence amongst us the beneficent rain-storms have come and swept them away. And we have taken the likeliest advantage always of this kindness and long-suffering of Providence, and impudently trusted that the Divine mercy which spared us once and again

The Punishment of Our Sins

would continue for ever to spare us and save us while we remained unrepentant and unimproved. So long as we remained in ignorance of the deadly sin we were committing against our neighbours and ourselves in allowing filth to accumulate and breed corruption in our midst we might plead ignorance in mitigation and blamelessly trust that the deliverance which had come to ourselves and our fathers in times past might be relied in for times to come. But we are more enlightened now, we know the natural consequences of our acts, and Providence has never offered the promise of continued protection and favour to those who sin against the light of reason and knowledge. We know our duty now, and if we neglect it we neglect it at our peril. We have for years been breeding our own corruption, and if worse things have not befallen us than we deserved, let us be humbly grateful. And let us offer the first fruits of repentance by making instant amendment. Gentlemen of the Municipal Council, will you make an effort to CLEAN THE TOWN?

Yours truly,

REFORM.

Clarkson, of St. Augustine's College, Canterbury, was admitted to the Deaconate. The preacher of the occasion was Rev. F. W. Colley, of Carbonear, who spoke from the text 1 Cor. 1:18.
