BRITISH SOLDIER SHOT THREE TIMES.

George C. Chircock, Special Correspondent Daily Mail.

William Henry Gallimore, of the 1st Loyal North Lancashire Regiment, is a standing and heroic example of the Englishman who "never says die." He is at the present moment in a hospital bed in Paris under the care of distinguished French surgeons. I saw him to-day, a curious bundle of bandages and splints, and heard his story of a terrible experience on the battlefield—

"I was first shot three weeks ago some next Monday. I was in a cornfield when a bullet got me in the leg and fractured my thigh. I went down all in a heap, but managed to bind myself up and stop the bleeding. There were lots of dead Germans near me, and one living German officer, who was lying quite close. He could understand a little English and gave me a piece of bread. That was the only food I had for five days.

"After I was shot two of our stragglers came along and tried to help me to get along, and tried to help me to get along, but the fire was too hot for them and they let me down again. Then a German ambulance came and picked up the officer. I asked him to tell them to take me too, but although he was so kind about the piece of bread he wouldn't do it. He only said, 'You are an enemy.'

Safety In a Shell Hole.

"That was my first night on the battlefield. The next day was Tuesday. On this day I was shot for the second time, a stray bullet hitting my left hand while I was lying there. Seeing a hole in the ground made by one of those big shells the Germans fire, I rolled into it, and thought myself lucky to be there. They had trained a Maxim on the part of the cornfield in which I lay and the bullets were ripping across the top of the hole, and hitting the opposite side. I watched them for quite a time.

"After I had been in the hole for a time I crawled out again to look for water, which I got from the water-bottles of the dead Germans. But I could not find anything to eat. On this day two Gloucesters came and tried to make a stretcher for me with their rifles, but again it was too hot, with the big shells and the Maxims firing, and they had to give it up.

"Tuesday night was my second night. On Wednesday I was shot again—the third time—in the right foot, the bullet entering the sole of the foot as I lay there. I did not think of much all this time except to call for help and to crawl round from one of the dead Germans to another looking for water. About a mile and a half away I could see a regiment—it turned out to be the Welsh—digging trenches.

"I was now very faint and hungry, but I got through the night all right and next day, Thursday, I crawled 30 yards in the direction of the trenches. For the rest of the day I lay quiet. All this day I saw no one, but at night I had my first piece of luck. In one of the German water-bottles I found some rum. It was this, I think, that kept me alive that night.

"Ought to Get the V.C."

"On the following day, Friday—my fifth day in the cornfield—I felt better able to move, and I determined to make a last effort to save my life. I started crawling along in the direction of the trenches. It was very hard, seeing that my left thigh was fractured and my right foot wounded, but after several hours I covered 800 yards.

"I was about finished when a man of the Welsh regiment saw me and came out for me. That man ought to get the Victoria Cross. I didn't ask his name and I don't know what it was, but he was a real good one, and no mistake. He got me up on his shoulders and he carried me right in. The Germans were firing all the time and I was so near finished that I wanted him to drop me and let me die. It didn't seem right for him to be worrying about getting me in. All he said was, 'You hold tight, old man; I've got you all right and I don't intend to let you go!'

The surgeon's examination of the man when he arrived bore out the statement of this remarkable escape. His fractured condition and the state of his three separate wounds were sufficient evidence of the truth of his story, which is one of the most curious that have yet come under the notice of the hospital doctors. Gallimore is getting along very well now and will "mend up" all right in time in spite of his three wounds and his five days on the battlefield.

The pointed décolletage is a thing of the past. The square cut neck line is in high favour and it is severely plain, being seldom softened with trimming of any description.

BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR, 1805. In 1804 Spain joined France against England and it was by the strength of the combined fleets that Napoleon hoped to crush England's naval power. In September, 1805, Nelson set out to find the fleet and they met off Cape Trafalgar and the battle that ensued resulted in the greatest victory ever gained by Britain on the seas. England had, however, to mourn the loss of her famous commander, Nelson, being mortally wounded in the moment of victory. S. T. COLERIDGE born 1772, English poet, philosopher and critic. The intellect of Coleridge is to be estimated rather by that of which it was capable, which it contemplated, and which it suggested, than by that which it achieved. EDMUND WALLER died 1687, aged 82. One of the most graceful of English poets.

ENGLAND YET!

You have been offered a coward's truce, Peace—and a lasting shame! Ah! but little they know you still Who plotted to blast your name! Little they recked of the wrath unchecked Which has leapt to a blinding flame!

Mother of ours, our hearts are true To the trust that our sires bequeathed. We had striven hard in the cause of peace Till the shameful word was breathed. Our answer comes in the roll of drums And the flash of a sword unsheathed!

Your sons shall offer their lives, their yield. Your daughters their sons shall yield. To the mine-strewn sea where the grey ships glide. Guarding the fame of your cherished name With the strength of that living shield.

We fear not death in your hour of need For honor can never die! Mother, our arms shall be strong to-day As thy sons' in the years gone by To keep thee from thy circling sea, Free as the open sky! —TOUCHSTONE.

Military Law.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "A Good Old Sivash."

When an army has captured a city or province it puts it under military law.

Military law is a little more dangerous than appendicitis and considerably more inconvenient than a ball and chain. It consists of a protest march, a military judge or commanding officer, with no supreme court except Providence. All ordinary laws are thrown into the waste basket, judges and juries go on a long vacation, the habeas corpus is carried out with the garbage and order becomes not only the first, but the only law of Hell, which is what Sherman said was.

The business of military law is to maintain order, and a military government usually gives a hint by shooting the hint. Under military rule almost everything is punishable by death. A czar is a mild little grandfather beside a colonel, who can have an unarmed citizen shot because he forgot to keep a light burning after 10 p.m.

Military law was not designed to be blood-chivalry, but after a commander has been shooting soldiers of the enemy for a few months and then gets a chance to practice on an unarmed population, he sometimes can't overlook the opportunity for target practice. As a rule the bigger the fool at the head of military law, the more funerals under his rule. It takes nerve to go to war and stay chosen balls by catching them in the vest pocket, but it is even more dangerous to stay at home and be ruled over by a 25-year-old lieutenant, who believes that the way to honor his flag is to shoot the unarmed enemies who crown it.

There is a great deal of military law in Europe just now. For this reason Turkey is about the only civilized spot east of New York. The United States has maintained military law in Vera Cruz for almost a year, but American military law does not specialize in fangoria. It cleans up alleys, kills mosquitoes, flushes sewers and swats flies. The American brand of pistol-pain justice has been greatly admired by humanitarians and could be applied with benefit to many American cities.

STILL MISSING.—The efforts of the search parties who were out last night looking for Mrs. E. J. Lundy, have again proved futile. All the nearby country roads were scoured and diligent enquiries were made, but there was no trace of the missing woman. At ten o'clock this morning a search party left the home of Mr. E. J. Brophy, brother of the missing woman, on Colonial St., to continue the search. At 2 o'clock this afternoon squads from the C.C.C. took part in the quest.

Encourage HOME Industries.

We have the past year tried to bring before the public notice the many advantages to be gained by buying

Home Made Goods.

We most emphatically state that never was the need more apparent, with most of our factories running half time and men earning half wages. Why? Because a certain prejudice exists against Home-made Goods. Every dollar sent out of the country makes that one less for home manufacturers. Take our line particularly

and Springs

Absolutely no need of importing them, as the cost must be higher. We offer to-day FELT MATTRESSES as good, or even better, than the Ostermoor, from $5 to $10 cheaper. Our new Health Mattress, 6 n. bands, are real beds in themselves, made of Pure Cotton, absolutely sanitary.

On and after October 15th we will have on exhibition in our Showroom, second flat, the above goods, and shall be only pleased to show and explain same to anyone requiring same. Our improved OXFORD SPRINGS are taking well. We will sell you a SURFACE OAK SIDEBORD for $15.50 that cannot be imported less than $21.50. We will sell you a 5 PIECE PARLOUR SUITE in Fancy Velour $5 to $10 cheaper than the imported.

Then all things considered, don't you think it better to encourage Home Industries and keep the money in the country?

The Double Circus Act at Rossley's.

Crowds flock to the Rossley Theatre to witness one of the finest circus acts ever seen: Serpentello, the dainty little contortionist and most wonderful back bender in the profession. The boneless lady is a wonder, while the frog man twists and ties himself into all sorts of different knots; Serpentello is really not a ground worker, but performs her marvellous feats of contortion and balancing in mid air. When her apparatus is fixed she will work up in the ceiling of the Rossley Theatre on a swinging ladder called the death swing. The pictures for to-night are all changed and of the highest order. Viareggio, with all the leading motion picture favorites.

Expression of Sympathy

FROM THE BRITISH SOCIETY. St. John's, Oct. 17, '14.

Monsieur Roche, The Palace, Rt. Rev. and Dear Sir: The Executive Committee of the Nfld. British Society, mindful of the many kind offices of His Grace the late Archbishop Howley, and His Grace's well known veneration for our old organization, desire to give expression of profound sympathy with our Roman Catholic fellow citizens in the great loss which their Church and institutions have sustained by the passing away of their late beloved Archbishop. As a mark of respect the flag of the Society will be flown from our building until after the interment. We have the honor to be, Yours sincerely, J. M. CARBERRY, Secretary.

The Patriotic Fund.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir:—In reference to this Fund, the editor of the Daily News says that it is not intended to pay any of the expenses of the Nfld. Contingent. I should like to know then, why the payment of supplies for the Camp was made by cheque signed by the Paymaster and crossed by John S. Munn, Treasurer of the Patriotic Fund? Yours truly, —M.
