The names of the Hon. George Brown west Toronto, have been named as possible candidates. Mr. Brown has been three months absent from Canada, and is now detained in Scotland in attendance on an invalid member of his family. He is not expected to return before the election is over, and moreover has not the slightest intention of re-entering Parliamentary life at this time. Mr. Macdonald is absent at a watering place, and will remain there some weeks longer, but before leaving he intimated his intention not to become a candidate for Parliament at this moment under any circumstances. the month and the quarter ended on the 30th of last month has just been completed by the emigration officers, and by them transmitted to the Board of Trade. From these returns it appears that the emigration, which has for many years formed an important element in the trade of Liverpool, which has for many years formed an important element in the trade of Liverpool, will continues to improve, the last month and quarter both exhibiting a large interess over those of the same periods of last year. During the month of June last there sailed out of Liverpool forty-three passengers hips, carrying 18,608 passengers, against fifty-three ships and 11,550 passengers in the same month of last year, thus showing a decrease of ten ships, but an increase of 7,058 in the number of passengers as compared with the same month of 1867.

In the course of the last month, out of the forty-three vessels which sailed, thirty-four of them sailed under the provisions of the passengers' shipping act, and they carried 17,887 passengers, of whom 650 were cabin and 17,337 were steerage passengers. Of the whole, 6,448 were English, 532 were Scotch, 3,025 were Irish, and 7,987 were foreigners. The thirty-four ships which sailed under the provisions of the act comprised twenty-six with 15,460 passengers for the United States of America; of these latter 531 were cabin, and 14,929 were steerage passengers. The total number of passengers included 5,564 English, 489 Scotch, 2,599 Irish, and 6,808 foreigners. There also sailed six ships to Canada with 1,940 passengers to Canada 673 were English, there were not any Scotch, 113 were Irish, and 1,155 foreigners. To Victoria, in Australasia, there were two ships with 587 passengers of whom seven were in the cabins and 580 were in the steerage. Of the passengers of whom seven were in the cabins and 580 were in the steerage. Of the passengers of whom seven were in the cabins and 580 were in the steerage. Of the passengers of whom seven were in the cabins and 580 were in the steerage. Of the passengers of 313 were Irish, and 24 were from other countries.

During the month there also sailed nine vessels as "short ships," that is, ships which do not sail under the provisions of the act referred to. These ships took out 621 passengers. The vessels included five with 525 passengers for the United States, one for Victoria, in Australia, with 42 passengers, one with 30 passengers for South America, one with 30 passengers for the East Indies, and one with 21 passengers for Africa.

During the quarter which began with April and ended with June last, 77 ships sailed under the act for the United States, carrying 45,506 passengers, one wind 1479 were cabin and 44,027 steerage passengers. To Canada there also sailed under the act 18 ships, with 339 cabin and 8,641

CROPS IN LOWER CANADA.—The crops in Lower Canada do not promise well.—The Montreal News says that the hay crop had the benefit of copious rains in the spring—hence it acquired strength and resisted the influence of the drought; but late sown grain will prove a miserable failure. In many cases the farmers will be lucky if they recover the seed put into the ground. There are some instances in which crops were sown at the end of May and the first week in June, where they are not six inches above the ground, although the grain is heading—in fact, maturing—rapidly; but the stalks are so stunted that, cut it as close as they can, the owners can gather no straw. "What is to become of the cattle next winter?" is the question farmers are asking each other.

Among the Dead in New York-Scenes at the Morgue.

During the six days ending at noon on Priday, the mortality in New York alone exceeded 1,000. Of this number, 832 died in dwelling hobies and in the streets. The maximum mortality was reached on Wednesday forenoom. Since August, 1838, the people of the city have not experienced auch mortality from what is popularly known as "sunstroke," as during the past week. From the 18th to the 16th of that month (1853) inclusive, the deaths fammestip de excel numbered nearly 300. The most fatal day was the 14th, although the temperature was lower than on the preceding or the succeeding days, but there was more moisture in the atmosphere. Then as now the occupants of tenement houses were the principal uniferers, and many deaths from exhausting were reported by physicians as deaths from heat. It is a noticeable fact that, excepting persons who suffer from diseases of the heart or the nervous system—and the latter class includes the great numbers who indulge in the use of ardent with the latter class includes the great numbers who indulge in the use of ardent with the country of the latter class includes the great numbers who indulge in the use of ardent with the substant of the latter class includes the great numbers who indulge in the use of ardent with the challed miles and the substant hear when the substant in the substant hear in the substa the temperature exceeded the mean temperature of the corresponding days for the past 25 years by 10°. The last two weeks of June were excessively humid, and paved the way for the succeeding fatal period. The experience of the present year corresponds with that of 1853, and shows that similar causes produce similar effects. In 1866 the mortality from the effects of the heat was greater than in 1853, but it extended over a greater period of time, and consequently the alarm felt was not so general. All experience demonstrates that sunstroke is a result of heat and moisture combined, and not of heat alone. Joined to Bellevue hospitalisthe Morgue. In it are seven slabs of marble, supported by iron columns, resting upon a marble floor. On these slabs of stone the unknown bodies are placed for recognition. Usually, the Morgue is comparatively little used, but during the heated term, which commenced on the 14th instant, the place has been crowded. The room in which the bodies lie is separated from the main apartment by a glass partition, so that the visitors may view the dead without interfering with the attendants. The Morgue was crowded on Friday with men, women, and children. Many would gaze for hours, as if only to gratify a morbid curiosity. The bodies while lying on the slabs are frequently drenched with carbonic acid, and a constant spray of water is kept running upon their breasts. The scene at the Dead-House was enough to make the gayest sad. Men with large brawny arms came and went with coffins and dead bodies. In a court between the Dead-House and the shed, red coffins were piled up like cord-wood. Here were little coffins for children; in the corner was a blue coffin, while in the shed and Dead-House, square boxes, cracked coffins, and stretchers were lying in all positions. Every two or three minutes some one wanted to see the Keeper who had charge of the dead. Among others was a spare woman about 35 years of age. She was in search of her husband. Mr. O'Brien, the Keeper of the Morgue, after listening to h
