

WOMEN, AVOID OPERATIONS

Many Unsuccessful - And Worse Suffering Often Follows. Mrs. Rock's Case A Warning.

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will show how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when often it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement. Paw Paw, Mich. - "Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has restored the health of thousands of sufwomen. Why don't you try it?

Telegraph and telephone stations were zealously shundelephone stations were zealously shun-ned. He would have liked to have seen a paper, so as to judge what the police thought in the case of the theft of the wealthy young stock broker's car, pro-vided Batchelor had allowed the thing to become public, which he very much doubt ed, from the little he knew of the man's character. It was hardly an enjsade one naracter. It was hardly an episode one ould care to see in print if one was dig-fied and self-made. And the Watermelon chuckled.

It took them longer than Bartlett hoped, sticking to narrow, unused country roads, and the next night found them still in Vermont. They spent the night at the victage boarding-house, and once again Billy and the Watermelon went down the road a bit to look at the universe, and Henrietta and Bartlett up the road.

The following day, to Bartlett's satistion, they got lost. It was late in the ernoon when they stopped at Milford, small town in New Hampshire, and afternoon when they stopped at Milford, a small town in New Hampshire, and made inquiries about the next town. Was good? It wasn't far, the farmer whom they questloned, assured them, only five they thanked him and pushed on.

They went on and on and nightfall apparently miles from any town or habitation. Bartlett was pleased. They were lost, and by great good luck they might remain lost for a considerable length of thme. The general, too, was delighted. They would make a night of it. It was what he had long wanted to do and now they would have to. The lunch basket had been filled earlier in the day at a country store, so there would be enough to eat. The seats of the autos were soft and one could sleep in the cars or on the ground, as one preferred. It was warm and the rugs and shawls would be covering enough.

Bartlett spread the filmy paper napkin on his knees and taking the plate Henrietta handed him balanced it on his lap with the watermelon was William Hargrave Batchelor that it never occurred to him to doubt it. There were the cards, the monogram on the automobile, and the general to vouch for it. The paper's were a bit with the cars. Alphonse stood by to assist, and the others wandered off down the road before turning in for the night. Billy and the Watermelon soon drifted away by themselves up a tiny cow lane. "This is like old times," declared the general genially; "a night on the march, far out on the prairies, not a thing in sight, not a sound but a coyote yelping or the cry of a wolf."

"And Indians," said Henrietta, "hiding back of the nearest hillock, creeping up on you unawares."

Billy glanced behind her at the woods and wished they had chosen a more open

Far in the west the moon was sinking and here and there a star twinkled between the rolling clouds. A thunderhead was now and then revealed distinctly by flashes of distant lightning, and thunder rumbler ominously in the sultry night.

A whippoorwill called steadily and once a bat on graceful wing flew by in the eery light.

The general laughed. "That was living in those days, Billy," he said. "A man was a man and not an office automaton, a dimes saving bank."

CHAPTER XIV. Billy, Billy Everywhere.

Barlett nodded. He had been watching Henrietta through half-lazy, half-closed lids, leaning against a fallen log. "Potatoes two kisses a neck." sugagreed Henrietta, nodding.
