esigned, public attention has fixed itself on this one mainly—the neglect of bank directors to perform the duties they had undertaken. At stated intervals they met in the makers and magistrates of this country. board room, for the purpose, as was supposed, of taking oversight of the bank's business. Their duty was not only to assist the manager with their advice, but also to act as a check upon him. Unfortunately, however, in some cases directors were content with the mere formality of putting in an appearance on board days, and were in the habit of assenting, almost as a matter of course, to everything dictated by the manager and perhaps one or two of their own number acting with him. They took no pains to inform themselves of how the bank's means were being used, or whether the bulk of its assets were good or bad. When trouble came, they would declare that really they had no idea things were in such a state, and were as much surprised as the general public could be at what had happened. Then the papers would be after the offenders in full cry. ruined simply because directors did not perform their duties. Had they looked This is what has happened after every bank the petroleum industry. failure in Canada for a long time back.

In those days bank directors neglected In those days bank directors neglected to perform their duties. They should have given more close and intelligent personal attention to the bank's affairs, and then the men who did the mischief would have been checked before much mischief had been done. That was the old complaint, and we have had it repeated up to the present time. But now a new complaint is coming into fashion it appears. The charge it must be one capable both of concealing the capable both of concealing it must be one capable both of concealing the capable both of concealing it must be one capable both of concealing the capable capable coming into fashion it appears. The charge it must be one capable both of concealing their duties too well entirely, that they are beauties of the female form divine. As far giving altogether too much attention to as we can see, the page costume will not the business of the bank; and that in fulfil this requirement. consequence the bank is making too much money for the general good.

It appears that the directors of the Dominion bank, and those of the Federal benk too, have not been content to sit idly by and see the bank making only on ordinary commercial business. They of the western freight for Europe will be ed. As the archbishop had something to saw where much larger profits were to be made in other ways, and determined to make them. And so, either as an association having a local habitation and a name, or as private individuals acting in concert, they berrowed the bank's money and put it where it would do more good—that is, make money—than coall do made in the second that it is make money—than coall do made in ordinary business. Being themselves men of large means, they could say that they were able to stand and did say that they were able to stand and did stand between the bank and loss, like a buffer, at it were. Their private means, or the capital of their loan and securities association, would have to be all gone cre active of loss could come upon the bank. It common report speaks truly they have been the very antipodes of those directors of former time, through whose doing nething so many banks have collapsed. They have given their time and attention, not merely on board days but every day, to the bank's business; each not of them taking as much interest in it as if it were all his own. And this present result we see—misted per bent per annum profit made by the Federal daring the past six months, and Dominion bank stock at 200. Are these bank directors really performing their duties too well: Are there after all two sides to this question and another view that may be taken of it:

The directors of the Federal and Dominion bunks respectively, it is said, have been borrowing bank money and lending it on stocks. It is charged against them that what the law will not allow to be done directly they have been doing indirectly. A bank doing this kind of business runs great risk of loss. So it is generally supposed, and the directors referred to have been strongly censured for their alleged bad conduct. Let us see if there be not another side to this question—another view which may be taken of it.

"Volunteer" for making nonsensical and inaccurate but mischievous comparisons between a lieut-colonel of a school of gunnery and a lieutenant professor of the Royal military college; for, by implying that the gunnery officers sanction his venom, he places them in a very unenviable position. The object of "Volunteer" in this matter is clearly not the benefit of the artillery officers, but to strike over their heads at the college professors.

The latter would, if in their power and opportunity offered, wish to help their comrades in the practical schools of gunnery; certainly not to depreciate them.

As a matter of fact the service of the lieutenant professor, Royal military college is longer than that of the lieut-colonel Canadian artillery, and the former has had the honor of leading one of the columns of attack at the assault and capture of a strongly fortified position; on which ocasion the British force lost about one-sixth of its entire strength.
