mot a few ac called "cattle kings" to give the shing up. The New York Press says that prudent men have been expecting bad results for long time back, and thus continues:

Hundreds of thousands of cattle of all ages have simply been sacrificed, almost wantonly; because it has been plain for a long time that eattle delicately bred and of tender stock could not stand the exposure of a winter on the plains. During alme months of last year it is said that there was more than $4,000,000 lost from this cause in the Territory of Montana alone; and it is now estimated that more than 500,000 cows have perished. There may be some exageration in these latter figures, but the first have been pretily well determined from the assessment rolls of the territory in question.

It is evident that competition with corn fed cattle, which it was expected these plains cattle would develop, is not to be perimanent. But while it lasts it is certainly the most thorough or nelty to animals perhaps ever knewn. With the rapid increase of these animals the grass has naturally disappeared, in spite of hopful predictions to the contrary, and eattle, having nothing to eat, are simply left exposed without surfaces of the same in the terrible storms which sweep over that section.

There is no scarcity of bookkeepers, nor is the ane expensive thing to call in as auditor every quarter to half year fo go over the books. Business men and banks are to blame if they find when it is too late that they have been carrying a man or firm who kept his books in such a way that he never could tell whether he was on his feet or on his back.

The Man Who Palls.

Editor World: I ve read your articles about business having been overdrone and think you've litt the nail on the head. There has been carrying a man or firm who kept his books in such a way that he never could tell whether he was on his feet or on his back.

The wise man makes out a balance sheet every month, and compares one month with smoother. He knows where he is going. change. The January number contains some interesting university news.

The trustees of Trinity have before them a proposal to found a hall or college for women, alongside their institution, under the care of a lady principal, assisted by other teachers. The students would receive a portion of their training in this college and a portion of it in the University. From the way in which The Review speaks of the proposal. The World imagines that it would be a modified co-education scheme. Some time ago there was talk of erecting a hall in Queen's Park for a somewhat similar institution in connection with Toronto University, but of late nothing has been heard of the project. More accommodation is wanted in the college buildings, and appeal will this year be made for money to provide it.

MONTREAL, Jan. 30.—The libel suit of the Montreal Athletic Association against The Post in connection with articles published last. September, in which it was stated that three or four members of the Montreal Lacrosse Club sold a game to the Cornwalls, began this morning. Irwin Jenkins, a saloon keeper on McGill-street, testified that Brady, McNaughton and Patterson of the Montrealers agreed to make their club lose three straight games for 30 per cent, of the money won by betting on the event, and they paid $25 as a forfeit for the faithful carrying out of the agreement. The scheme was hatched by himself and Flanagan, a livery stable keeper, and Detective Suisey, who is now under arrest, was also in it. He made about $500 by the transaction. His testimony was partly corroborated by John McLaughlan, barkeeper in Jenkin's Saloon. The trial was not concluded when the court rose.
