

THE PET LAMB.

This little maid has finished her breakfast and has come out into the fields to play with a pet lamb that has been given her. The animal does not seem to be in the least afraid of her as she comes up to it with outstretched hands, and when she begins to run about and play the lamb stops eating the grass and gets ready to play too. What a nice pet to have, so gentle and harmless. We are sure they will have a good romp together in the fresh morning air and enjoy it thoroughly.

ALL THE MOMENTS FOR JESUS.

A servant would hardly do so queer a thing as to try to serve two masters. If he loved his master, and he was very good to him, he would be sure not to be servant too to one who hated him. And yet sometimes Jesus' own little servants who love him, and to whom he is very good, steal little bits out of the days to be cross and disobedient and idle in; and these things do not please Jesus, but Satan, who hates him. Little child, one is your Master, even Christ. When the Queen of Sheba saw the great King Solomon in his beautiful white robes, and heard the wise words which fell from his lips, she said. "Happy are . . . thy servants." Jesus' little servants are very happy, very safe.
