

for our future studies, and it is not, I believe, an overstatement to say that the opportunity which we all hoped for last year of being able to commence serious studies of principles of international law concerning friendly relations and co-operation among states in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations has been realized in concrete form.