

EXTRACTION.

the incision should with a lens for the removing any lens-capsule, iridic pig-minute blood-clots, earlier inspection. tissue shreds are alund, they are prone so to the iris, to the floating bodies left in and so greatly mar the that, but they estab-between the interior of de world, and thus the means of infect-within.

ve warned us of the to massage of the and lid-edges in at-the anterior-chamber borders of the lids are nal ocular apparatus eze and most crowded es. It has again and ated bacteriologically es remain infected long skin has been rendered a perform for the con-e office that the vibris-cosa, and the number l colonies planted upon ne alæ nasi closely re-find infesting the skin. Consequently, to rub, e edge of the lid over nd in the cornea, is to latter.

flushing the anterior ed (or some modifica-be used for washing from the eyeball, sac, the final toilet is made. re-point, a sterilized pi-d of a medicine-dropper have used for this pur-cent. solution of com-r it to the elaborately employed by some oper-t as difficult to sterilize as it is to sterilize the tion, it may be accepted not render it completely me at our disposal after ns.

on that the nearest ap-f the lid-edges that we by the application (with of an oily solution of

FIG. 4.

FIG. 5.

FIG. 6.