

His Majesty's Answer, delivered the 10th of July, 1771.

“ I shall ever be ready to exert my Prerogative, as far as I can constitutionally, in redressing any real Grievances of my Subjects ; and
“ the City of London will always find me disposed
“ to listen to any of their well-founded Complaints: It is, therefore, with Concern that I
“ see a Part of my Subjects still so far misled
“ and deluded, as to renew, in such reprehensible
“ Terms, a Request, with which I have repeatedly declared, I cannot comply.”
