MONTREAL PROFESSOR

Electrical Engineering Expert Bewilders Commission With Barrage of Fractions and Technical Terms - Thinks Ontario Lines Must Carry Seventy Per Cent. More Passengers Per Car Than American Concerns to Produce a Profit—He Is Not Yet Thru.

Anti-Hydro radial forces brought reinforcements from Montreal, the stronghold of the enemies of public ownership, in the person of an electrical engineering professor of McGill University, who literally took away the breath of the radial commission at Osgoode Hall yesterday afternoon with a barrage of fractions and technical terms. So bewildering was his mathematical attack on the Hydro estimates that some of the commissioners were temporarily lulled to sleep, only to wake up and find the witness still pouring forth a discourse in mathematics at the rate of about two hundred words a minute. Dr. Herdt contended that as a was no stronger than its weakest link, the Hydro radial system was no stronger than the most vulner-able points in any of its kines, and that estimates showing a glowing prospect for a particular line, should be toned down to meet weaker por-tions of other lines included in the system. He went over all the estimates and into details of the many factors that tend to increase or decrease the cost of operation.

The professor hotly attacked the Toronto and Eastern project, pointing out that this line would run for sev-eral miles along the waterfront, which was a non-residential section, and de-claring that the Hydro experts had not taken this into consideration in esti-mating the passenger business to be obtained per mile, and that it would increase by about four miles the distance each passenger would have to be carried for the fare, which he estinated would mean an additional cost of one cent per mile per passenger to be deducted from the revenue.

Another contention made was that at least an average of 40 passengers per car would have to be carried to produce a revenue over convenient to
